CANZONERI WINS

LOU AMBERS OUTCLASSED IN TITLE BOUT

NEW HOLDER TOYS WITH PLUCKY RIVAL
OVER 17,000 WITNESS FIGHT IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

New York, Yesterday. Tony Canzoneri won the world's lightweight boxing championship last night before 17,433 fight fans when he outpointed Lou Ambers in a 15-round contest at the Madison Square Garden. —Reuter.

Landing blows almost at will and shooting stinging rights and lefts to the body and face, Canzoneri reduced Ambers to a mere punch bag early in the bout.

The bell saved Ambers from being knocked out in the third round, during which he was twice floored with terrific left hooks, once for a count of two. A crushing right hook sent him to the canvas in the last round, but he was up almost immediately.

Canzoneri toyed with his opponent throughout, the latter being both game and willing to mix, though being powerless to hurt his nimble rival.

THREE ROUNDS LOST
The reinstated champion only lost the tenth, twelfth, and thirteenth rounds when Ambers was getting home more punches than at any other stage of the bout. Canzoneri held back in the last two rounds, apparently not wanting to slaughter his opponent.

The general opinion is that Ambers is good against anyone at his weight except Canzoneri, who weighed in at 9 st. 7 lbs. against Ambers's 9 st. 7½ lbs. —Reuter.

DETHRONED BY ROSS
Tony Canzoneri first came into the limelight in 1931 when he defeated Al Singer. He held the title for two years, but after staying off the challenge of Jack "Kid" Berg, the famous British lightweight, and others, he was finally defeated in 1933 by Barney Ross.

2 BODIES RECOVERED AT TSUN WAN

POLICE CONTINUE GRIM SEARCH FOR EIGHT MEN

COOK'S MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM EXPLOSION

Only the charred bodies of two of the unfortunate victims, a man and a woman, remain as mute witnesses to the terrible tragedy which occurred yesterday morning, when a junk loaded with 6,000 tins of oil, gasoline, and asphalt exploded at Tsun Wan Bay shortly after six o'clock. The bodies were picked up by a police launch later in the afternoon and removed to the Kowloon Mortuary, but they have not yet been identified.

The fact that clouds of smoke were seen rising from the vicinity of the Texas Co.'s plant, off which the explosion occurred, caused a certain amount of concern among the workpeople. Indeed, it was rumoured among the villagers near by that the works and plant had exploded, with the result that wives of fishermen of the district, with fear and anxiety written all over their faces, rushed to the shores of the bay to see whether those fishing at the time of the explosion had been hurt. Children who had gone out to tend the vegetable gardens on the neighbouring hillside were frantically sought by distracted mothers, amid scenes of something approaching panic. However, matters quieted down when it became known that the explosion had occurred on a junk some distance from the shore and the Texas Co.'s plant.

The spectacle of the junk itself enveloped in flames over 30 feet high was witnessed by crowds of the villagers. Two fire-floats from Hong Kong concentrated a number of hoses on the burning junk, which, after blazing furiously for over an hour, was eventually reduced to a few burnt planks.

The only survivor of the disaster is a cook named Tam Chi, who was blown into the sea by the force of the explosion. He managed to swim ashore and was immediately taken to the Tsun Wan police station, where he was examined.

POLICE COMBING VICINITY
According to his statement he was engaged in cooking the morning meal when the explosion occurred, some other members of the crew of the junk being occupied in attending to the sails, while others were still asleep.

The vicinity of the wreck is still being thoroughly combed by the police, in the hope of finding the remains of the other eight men who lost their lives in the tragedy.

The cause of the explosion remains a complete mystery.

DRAGONS IN CONFLICT AT CAROLINE HILL

Huge Crowd Present At Unforgettable Scene

NEARLY $5,000 COLLECTED

Despite the opportunities already provided for viewing the dragons, an immense crowd gathered at the South China Football Ground last night to have their last look at the most extraordinary sight ever seen in Hong Kong. The Gauze Dragon and the Silver Dragon, their interiors filled with lanterns, met in deadly combat to form the climax to a spectacular evening.

The stands at the grounds, which were illuminated with brilliant white lights, were packed to capacity, while the streets leading to the ground were lined with automobiles.

Gate money collected last night was in the vicinity of $3,000, and this, together with that accumulated on the previous night, brings the total to approximately $5,000. All this, after defraying outstanding expenses, will be donated to the Old Age Home at Kowloon City.

HUGE MAZE ERECTED
The main attraction of the evening was the performance of the Gauze Dragon. Promptly at 8 o'clock the proceedings commenced. Five different dances were included in the programme, and in order to make these possible a huge maze were erected in the centre of the field.

Canton, Yesterday. Steamers and trains from Hong Kong are again crowded to the limits of their capacity to-day, as they are bringing back Canton residents who went to the Colony to celebrate the Silver Jubilee.

More passengers have been carried by train and steamer during the celebrations than at any other time in the history of Canton-Hong Kong communications. People who made the trip were not only from Canton, but also from other parts of the province.

An American resident who returned here said that the illuminations in Hong Kong on May 6 and 7 were more extensive and brighter than Broadway and Coney Island at night.

Organiser Of National Salvation Army

COASTGUARD COMMANDANT DETAINED

Canton, Yesterday.

The execution of "General" Chu Cho-wen, County Commissioner of Public Works in Chungshan, is a first-class political sensation in South China owing to the fact that several prominent people are suspected of being connected with Chu's plot to establish an independent army in Kwangtung.

An official statement issued by the First Group Army Headquarters here linked the late Mr. Chu with a terrorist and murderous gang in Shanghai, bandit gangs in Kwangtung and other reactionary bodies. Chu was the organiser of the National Salvation Army, of which he was the Commander-in-Chief. Brig-General Yuan Tai, who holds a nominal post with the First Group Army, has now been placed under arrest in connection with this plot. Both Chu and Yuan took part in revolutionary activities with Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

Lieut.-Commander Tsai Teng-fai, commandant of the coast guards unit at Blas Bay, has been placed under arrest, and his coast guards have been demobilised. It is rumoured that this naval unit has some connection with the National Salvation Army as formed by Chu Cho-wen.

SHORT STORY

SPRING FOLLY

By H. A. MANHOOD

ALL through a long and laborious life Jonah Quill had delighted in the song of the nightingale, loving the sweetly and mysteriously of it with simple wholeheartedness. And birdsong was his daily pleasure as he worked alone in Dead-lop Woods so that his knowledge was large and his opinions balanced. The blackcap and warbler, woodlark and thrush were certainly fine in their way, but for him the nightingale at his gate was best of them all.

Jonah was short and sturdy as the gate-posts he heaved himself from heart of oak, meek by nature, but with a sensible pride of character, patient and quick to admire simple beauties, yet lonely withal, for his wife had soured uncommonly early, and now found pleasure only in solid gain and the fighting use of her tongue. Tall and thin she was, like a cobwebbed ladder, with a long, red, sniffling beak of a nose and mean, racing hands that never failed to catch a spider in its run.

They lived in an old knucklebone of a cottage on the edge of the woods. For many years Jonah had worked to make the cottage garden neat and fruitful, but the cottage itself was desperately untidy. Day by day Jonah worked expertly in the woods, hardly distinguishable from the knotted trunks which he split and shaped so truly, his tools a pleasure to the eye in their gleaming fitness, and at night he slept deep as a toad, as his wife complained, except in the spring of the year, when he spent the mid-night hours, often till the new-winded crack of dawn, listening at the gate to the splendid pair of nightingales, which nested so faithfully year after year at the foot of a thorn bush on the lush edge of the garden.

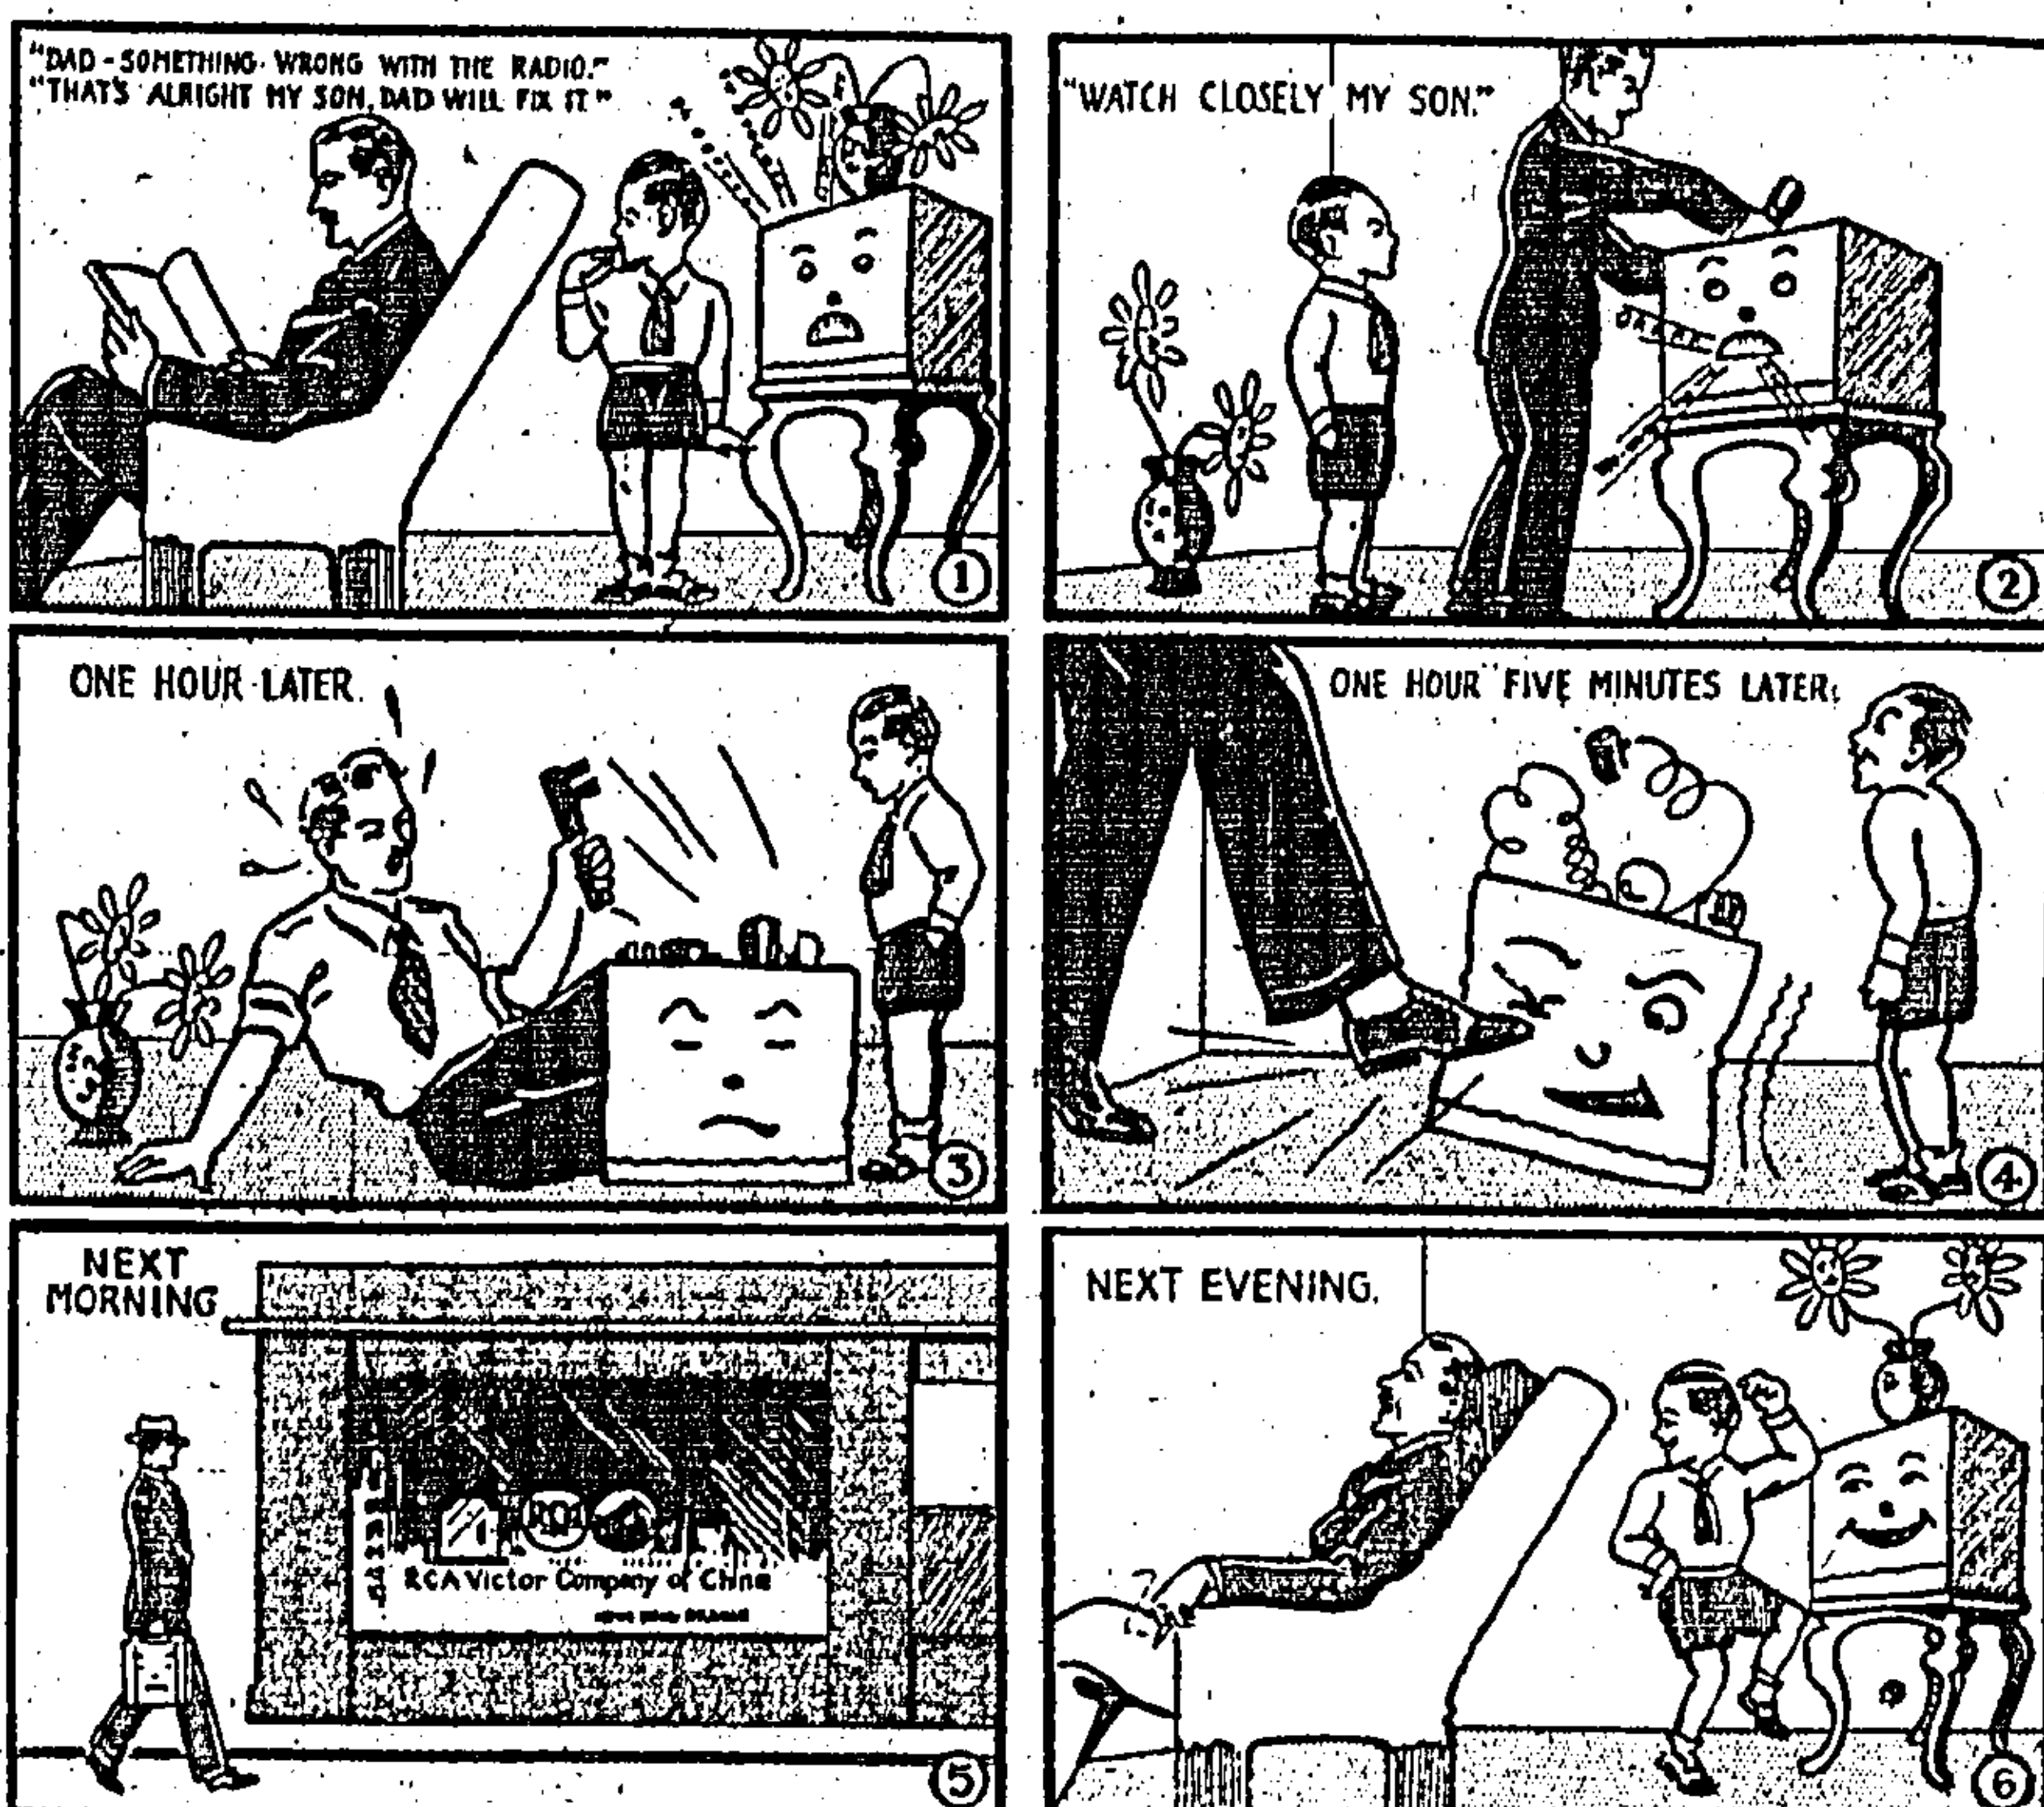

Ever since Jonah could remember a pair of nightingales had nested there and listening to them was like listening to the marvellous tales of much-travelled neighbours. In the early morning he would drink a pot of tea and pack a bit of bread and cheese, whistling a sprightly little song of his own, nodding to the nightingales as he passed on his way to work, and his wife, watching shrewishly, muttered and raged to think that he had not even heard her gibes, and spent the rest of the day in vicious, idle brooding, deliberately neglecting to provide food for Jonah on his return from the woods, bidding him fry the four or five olive-coloured eggs of the nightingale if he were hungry.

Bruising herself against his unchanging content, his wife became increasingly slatternly, but Jonah remained meek and tranquil. It seemed that nothing could touch him, except, perhaps, just one thing, she thought jubilantly one fine young summer morning. For a long time she pondered and then, waiting until Jonah had been gone an hour, she loaded his shotgun and fired down at the foot of the thorn bush, destroying the neat, horseshair-lined nest together with the hen and her clutch of eggs. Laughing and champing in ugly triumph, she spent the rest of the day imagining Jonah's dismay.

Stumping evenly home at dusk, Jonah paused at the gate to have a look at the hen and her eggs. But the staring whiteness of shot-torn twigs was like a blow in the face, and he saw with horror the wrecked nest and spattered eggs and the nightingale herself pitifully dead and still. On a bough nearby was the cock-bird, silent and afraid, all its brown-soldiered neatness gone. As he watched it flew a little way. Jonah stood very still, sick and solemn, remembering the pleasure and renewal the birds had brought into his life. All finished. Never again would he hear that eager, perfect song at his own gate, never again would a nightingale nest there for his special delight.

Year after year the cock had come so surely in early April, come in advance in fighting humour, singing gloriously, triumphantly, to find the homelike untenanted and undisturbed. And a little later the hen had come, too, as if she had travelled more slowly and carefully in recollection of her duty, and straightway nesting was begun, exquisite golden string notes throbbing by day and by night like an interpretation of God's own will.

Your body is crying out for assistance and Sanatogen contains exactly those helpful elements your body needs. Start your course of Sanatogen today, and drink in new health and vitality. Sanatogen has made you thoroughly healthy again!

NERVES?
Stomach Trouble?
 A London physician writes: "A noteworthy effect of Sanatogen is a better appetite, which is generally noticed within three or four days after beginning this nerve food."
 One of the many forms in which "nerves" manifest themselves is disorders of the stomach. Digestion—like every other function of the body—is governed by the nervous system. "Heavy digestion," "weak stomach"—all those troubles are in 9 out of 10 cases due to overstrained nerves. That is why Sanatogen often works wonders in all troubles of the stomach and the intestines. And even in the most serious cases of stomach disease Sanatogen is prescribed by the leading physicians, because it not only regulates the functions of the stomach, but also because it is so easily digestible and gives the stomach a rest. Enjoy your meals again, enjoy life again, by taking Sanatogen. Sanatogen is absolutely trustworthy. Over 25,000 physicians have expressed their admiration in writing.

Here is Health!

SANATOGEN adds health to your system. It conquers nervous conditions by feeding the nerves, is easily digestible and gives new fresh blood.

And that famous medical paper, "The Lancet," says: "There is abundant evidence of the value of Sanatogen as a restorative and food, more especially in cases of general debility."

FILM STAR FASHIONS

Cinema Dress Shop Answers Women's Dreams

MISS FAY WRAY INTRODUCES THE PUBLIC

London. HOW many of us have been moved to envy, as, sitting in our favourite cinema, we have gazed upon visions of feminine loveliness moving across the screen? Beautiful faces, beautiful figures and, above all, beautiful clothes!

How many of us have often murmured: "If only I had the pattern of those frocks!" Well, someone must have heard these whispers, have read these thoughts and determined to play Fairy Godmother for once. For the Cinema Dress Shop, just opened in a West-End London store, is the answer to surely a million women's dreams.

The influence of the screen on modern woman's dress is likely to be a great deal stronger than it has been, since we may now go to the Cinema Shop and buy exact copies of the stars' gowns and suits, as worn in recent films. There is also a varied assortment of "stills" in this wonderful shop to select from, and if the style chosen from these is not in stock, they will be made for the customer at a very reasonable price.

The star chosen to do the honours and introduce the public to the new Cinema Shop venture was Miss Fay Wray of "King Kong" fame. Miss Wray, it transpires, has been three months in England and is only just now going to see something of it.

She is going to see something of Paris and Italy, too, she hopes, before her return to the States.

Bow Fashions

Becoming Part Of Modern Dress

FIGURES ON FROCKS AND EVENING GOWNS

FASHION seems to have taken the bow as its motif this year. It appears in every phase of dress from morning to night, varying in size from a diminutive trimming to drapery that reaches from shoulder to shoulder.

It has become so much a part of modern dress that coats and frocks have an unfinished look unless they introduce it somewhere.

The bows of every period are being copied impartially by the dressmakers, gay Edwardian ones, demure Victorian and stiff little Regency affairs. Then there are the large, careless modern bows, which often serve a practical as well as decorative purpose, such as that of draping the neckline.

The bow has even invaded the world of tailormades. As a finish to blouses it softens the lines of the severely cut coat; sometimes it fastens the neck of coat or cape.

Evening brings with it a change of styles, in which, however, the bow still figures. Some evening gowns have the centre of the bodice pleated in the form of a bow. The Victorian idea of using this trimming on skirts has been borrowed by the dressmakers of to-day, who introduce it at the waistline, on the hem and even on the train.

As decoration, fastening or drapery, the bow is playing many parts in modern fashion. It is often used to provide colour contrast, particularly by the milliners, who have welcomed its revival with enthusiasm.

INITIALS BOW TO FASHION

Nothing Seems Complete Without Them

TABLE MATS INCLUDED

London. IT looks as though nothing will be quite complete this spring unless one's initials are attached in very large, modern lettering.

Packs of cards, in bright colours, have a band of gold round the edge and in the centre three large initials, diagonally printed to order. If you are a bridge player, you can combine these packs with initialled table covers, the latter in washable suede and therefore very useful.

Even table-mats, in various heat-resisting materials, are decorated with initials in a geometrical shape, and are so attractive that when using them one may really dispense with linen mats for an informal meal.

LACE TABLE MATS

Patchwork Appeals To Many Hostesses

AN idea appealing to many hostesses at the moment is the patchwork lace set of centre and table mats, made from odds and ends of lace which perhaps have been lying in a family drawer, unused for many a year. All kinds of lace play their part in the Spring and Summer table scheme and scraps of real lace, in particular, can be used to make up into handsome table mats.

Muslins as well can be utilised in conjunction with pieces of flax, guipure, Valenciennes and tulle. The laces are sewn together with the finest of lace thread stitches and care is taken that the most important pieces make a centre for the patchwork grouping. If a length of narrow lace is available, length of narrow lace is available, each mat is worked at the edges with a neat border.

It has been found that these sets, coloured as they are in a soft cerise tone, make a really attractive acquisition.

BREAD NEGLECTED

Starchy Food Essential To Energy Production

IT is difficult to understand the neglect of bread in the present-day diet of the middle and upper classes. The poor have always understood its value, and it is because of this fact that, considering the limitations of diet a low income entails, they preserve so much of their vitality and stamina. The same phenomenon is observed among Scottish peasant folk, whose consumption of cake, scones and bread is very high.

Yet among the English upper and middle classes the consumption of bread and all starchy foods is low. Not only is starchy food essential to energy production, but in its absence the body is unable to utilise the other two foods, proteins and fats. Many people therefore, who for slimming purposes or other reasons have reduced their bread consumption to the minimum, are actually being starved, although their diet may be otherwise rich and varied.

ONE-SIDED EFFECT TO VARY THE NECKLINE

THE novel one-sided effect is among the methods dressmakers are employing to vary the neckline this spring. A black belt is worn over the pale peach frock, which has a black coat.

EVENING DRESSES

Thin And Transparent Materials Used

ACCESSORIES INCLUDE FLOWERS CAPES AND WRAPS

EVENING dresses are made of fine tulle, tulle, stuff satin, but the thin and transparent materials are also used. Plaid touches adorn some of them and recall an earlier period—a green plaid sash is worn, for instance, with a dress of mole tulle. There are bateau necks and V necks. Some have the V back and front. There are low fronts and some dresses have only shoulder-straps with ruffling across the back and the front of the bodice. Armholes are often much cut out, especially in paillette dresses. Fullness does not always spring from the waist with much gathering at the back. It is also induced by means of heavy flouncing set below the hip. Whalebone is sometimes used to hold up the looped hems. Back panels contribute to the emphasis on the back. These are caught in at the waist and trail behind. The train is seen, but is not exaggerated.

Almost any colour can be found, but some of the most distinctive are mauve, navy, purple. Some dresses are shaded from one colour into another. Accessories to evening dress are many, including huge flowers worn at the neck or hip, small capes of ruffled net, three-quarter coats made of stiff white satin, long redingotes also made of satin, as well as wraps of ostrich feather, cock-tail, and of net with flowers applied to it which are cut from the print of which the dress is made. Bright prints are everywhere, some of them with a black ground and with fittings of the bright stuff framed in black. A scarf may be of bright green and red flowers on a black background and with a black border.

WET WEATHER WEAR

Umbrella Cases And Oiled Silk Coats

PATENT LEATHER BAG

London. UNEXPECTED showers need not cause inconvenience either on holiday or shopping expeditions.

There is a new umbrella case that is made of fine leather in any colour, finished with a cord and tassel that ties over the shoulder. The hands are left free between showers. The case is sold complete with a short umbrella that has a full-sized cover, or empty to fit any kind of umbrella one may already possess. Coats are of oiled silk in thick quality, with cord velvet collar, dark strap at the neck and clip fastenings.

A patent leather handbag is smart and serviceable on rainy days.

DRY SKINS

Oil Massage And Home Treatment

THERE are packs which look like ordinary face creams but which will give the contours the necessary uplift without hardening into a stiff mask. This type of pack is quite safe to use on a skin which lacks plenty of natural oils. If a home-made treatment is preferred, there is always the egg-pack, but it must only be used after the skin has been specially prepared. To do this, first massage into the skin almond, olive, or turtle oil. The oil must be used generously and can be smoothed in by hand or patted until absorbed. The white of an egg, lightly beaten up, is then brushed over the skin with a camel-hair brush and left on for half an hour.

Remove the mask thus formed with oil or one of the oily skin tonics already mentioned. If water is used for the purpose it should be boiled up beforehand and allowed to cool, or distilled water can be employed.

PARIS FASHIONS

Exaggerated Modes May Be Modified

WOMEN are to go back to hobble skirts this autumn. A journalist who has been going the rounds of the Paris fashion houses says that some of the models he has seen make the mannequins look like kangaroos! But Paris always starts a new fashion, or a return to an old one, by showing terribly exaggerated models which nobody ever wears; then the idea is modified. So the result of the latest fashion stunt will probably be that skirts will be a good deal narrower, but not ultra-hobble.

One hears too, that the new hats are either very flat or very high, your choice according to the way you do your hair.

PATOU'S NEW COLOUR

Three Tone Wear

Paris. AMBER in light, mid and dark shades is Patou's new colour and smacks of wheatear tones in different phases under sunlight. It is a happy colour note in satin blouses for raven's wing blue and black suits or caped ensembles. The three tones are distributed through morning-sports and afternoon to cocktail and evening gowns, one in the cocktail group being of black satin with an amber back to a high corage which is covered by a fitted Elton jacket with full elbow-length sleeves.

SWATOW SOCCER XI TO PLAY TO-DAY

Will Meet South China At Caroline Hill

FORMER COLONY STARS IN VISITING SIDE

An interesting game will take place at Caroline Hill at 3 p.m. to-day when the Swatow Chinese team, which is en route to their home port from the Kwangtung Provincial Games, recently held in Canton, meet a South China team.

The visitors have among their complement several well-known former local stars, including Leung Yuk-tong, an ex-Interporter, Wong Yu-tong, a St. Joseph's player and Leo Wai-koon, also a well-known player.

The Swatow team will be chosen from the following:

Wong Kow-sui, Chan Man-chun, Lun Oi-yun, Yau Ming-king, Lo Potat, Lee Yee, Leung Yuk-tong, Hong Chun-kwai, Wong Yu-tong, Leo Wai-koon, Leo Kai-ming, Tang Min-on and Leo Wai-koon.

South China: Wong Wah-kai, Yu Hing-yuen, Lai Yin-chun, Henry Young, Lin Tak-po, Leo Kam, Young Suk-yick, Cheuk Shok-kam, Chan Tak-fai, Lai Shui-wing and Leo Shok-yau.

KOWLOON BOWLING GREEN CLUB HOLD JUBILEE SUPPER

OVER 70 MEMBERS IN ATTENDANCE

PRESIDENT'S REFERENCE TO MR. BRADFORD'S DEPARTURE

Over 70 members of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club were present at the Jubilee supper and smoking concert held last night in the Club-house, when a thoroughly good time was enjoyed by all present.

Mr. W. E. Hale, Vice-President of the Club, was in the Chair and made a short speech congratulating the Jubilee Sub-Committee on their splendid work during the Jubilee week, and for their efforts that night.

Mr. Bradford's Departure

Mr. Hale also made reference to Mr. T. F. Bradford's forthcoming departure from the Colony on retirement, and paid tribute to the latter's untiring efforts on the various sub-committees on which he had served during his tenure of stay in the Colony.

Following the dinner a concert was held. Mr. W. Woodward rendered several fine pieces at the piano, both humorous and otherwise, while Mr. R. Sander sang the "Jolly Old Cavalier" and was heartily encouraged. He rendered "Trade Winds" in response to the latter.

Excellent Songs

Mr. A. R. Drumby sang "The Vagabond" and "Trees" while Mr. C. B. Hosking rendered several excellent humorous songs which kept the audience in roars of mirth.

The evening wound up with community singing led by Mr. J. G. Meyer.

A MODERATE attendance on the Club ground yesterday witnessed a rousing encounter between the champions of the First Division, South China "A," and a strong side selected from the remainder of the league, in which the champions were successful by the odd goal in three.

Both of South China's goals were scored by Chan Tak-fai, a comparative newcomer to the senior team, and were the result of quick opportunism and splendid shooting.

South China's defence proved far superior to the somewhat crude efforts of the opposing forward line, and Lee Tin-sang and Lau Mau, working in perfect unison, effectively wrecked all the schemes and thrusts of Howe and his colleagues, with powerful kicking, and forceful tackling.

Wong Wing was often in the picture and played his normal game until he committed a fatal error which led to the Rest scoring their only goal—an unaccountable lapse on the part of a capable custodian.

The Chinese halves played their part well, working with complete understanding with the rearguard, and with the forwards. Long, sweeping passes to the wings, and deft touches to the inside men, were a feature of the hardworking and constructive trio.

Both wing-halves were more than a match for their opposing wingers, and, though Blackford was given really very little to do, seldom receiving a good pass, Leo Kwok-wai was always in close attendance. Leung In-chun checked Moss and Tommy Pile time and again by clever positioning and quick tackling at the right moment, whilst Leung Wing-chiu, aided by Lee Tin-sang, gave Howe little scope for that player's eccentric swerves and rushes.

Newcomer's Deadly Shooting

Chan Tak-fai was deadly in his shooting, and should have been given more opportunities, but in the Chinese forward line, it was Tso Kwai-shing who caught the eye. This winger literally dazzled with his clever tricks and knack of always "losing" Lai Kwok-chui, his opposing wing half. Time and again Tso flashed over centres from every conceivable angle and position, and his form throughout was equal to the best he has given this season.

Fung King-cheong played a thoughtful game, hanging well back, and distributing the ball well, but his shooting was well wide of the target.

Remarkable Headwork

The left-wing did not have the same chances as that of the right, but were always well in position, and Lee Shok-yau was well on the mark with his centres. Tam Kong-pak did not show his usual dash, but his remarkable headwork was in evidence throughout.

The whole forward line, splendidly supported by their halves, showed good combination and directness in their methods, and

SEASON'S LAST FOOTBALL GAME THIS AFTERNOON

NAVY MEET ARMY IN KOTEWALL CUP

SAILORS' DEFENCE GREATLY STRENGTHENED

The last representative, and incidentally the very last, soccer game of the season takes place this afternoon on the Naval ground at Causeway Bay, when the Royal Navy will encounter the Army in the final game of the Kotewall Charity Cup series.

The Navy are holding their strongest side this afternoon and will go all out for a win, and, if they succeed, the competition will result in a triple tie as both the Army and South China have already secured wins.

Defence Strengthened

The inclusion of McGuire and Love in the Navy intermediate line is bound to strengthen their defence, and, in spite of Ridley and Higgins having found their form on Friday against the Fusiliers, it is doubtful whether the Army forwards will find it an easy task to break through.

Providing the weather is not too hot, some fairly good soccer should be witnessed.

The game commences at 5 p.m., and the teams are:—

Army: Rowlands; Swain, Steele; Kenoghan, Lawton, North; English, Higgins, Sandford, Ridley and Baldry. Reserves—Harmsworth, Ash, Mather, Howlett.

Navy: Crocker; Beard, Moss; Hughes, McGuire, Love; Baxter, Rose, Connell, Slavin and Wearmouth.

with their openings, should have won by a far larger margin.

Rowlands Again Shines

Rowlands and Mak Sui-hon were the heroes of the Rest's sorely tried defence. The former brought off countless brilliant saves, chiefly by his own fine sense of anti-

LINCOLNS RALLY TO BEAT REST

WILLY EXCELS AS PIVOT FOR CHAMPIONS

ON the Club ground yesterday the Lincolns proved themselves worthy soccer champions of the junior division when they defeated the Rest by the odd goal in five after being a goal in arrears shortly after the interval.

Up to the interval the Rest were holding their own and at odd periods were enjoying slightly the better of the exchange, but, settling down to real earnest football, the Lincolns later showed their superiority and had the Rest on the defensive, with the exception of an occasional breakaway, throughout the concluding stages of the game.

In goal, Taylor was very sound, giving a great display of first-time clearances and anticipation, and through the sound defence put up by Dobbs and Shaw he was never seriously troubled.

Willy, in the pivotal position gave a very good display throughout the entire game, never allowing Duncan to wander far from his heels, and his well-directed passes to either winger resulted in many brilliant raids. Chapman and Ibbett, in the right and left half-back positions, also gave all the support desired in both attack and defence.

Strength At Forward

The Lincoln forwards were the pick of the team, their combined movements and positional play being a feature of the game. Toyno and Clayton, the wingers, were great in their movements down the wings and their well directed passes to their inside forwards, Rush and Setters, resulted in the goals obtained.

In goal for the Rest, Harmsworth had a very busy time throughout the game, but gave a great display and was very seldom at fault.

Slack and Dudley, in the defence, were, however, most unreliable at times and allowed the Lincolns to go through on many occasions.

In the half-back position Ng Ying-kay and Eckersley gave of their best and played a great game, but were unable to stem the tide of thrustful Lincoln attacks.

TENNIS LEAGUE COMMENCES WITH MIXED DOUBLES

C.R.C. CHALLENGE TO U.S.R.C.

CHANGES IN MIXED DOUBLES AND "D" DIVISION FIXTURES

Two late entries in the Mixed Doubles Lawn Tennis League and the "D" Division have resulted in a complete revision of fixtures for these two Divisions.

The Kowloon Cricket Club have now entered a "B" team in the Mixed Doubles League, while the Kowloon Indians Tennis Club, who sent in their entry some time ago, but which was subsequently mislaid, are now in the "D" Division.

The League proper commences to-morrow with two Mixed Doubles matches.

The U.S.R.C. who have won the Dunlop Shield during the past two seasons, are still as strong as ever and have the leading Mixed Doubles pair, L. Goldman and Miss R. Hancock, while Mrs. J. F. Kayll, the Colony lady champion, is also a member of the team.

SILVA'S RINK SET NEW RECORD

TAIKOO DROP POINTS TO FOOTBALLERS!

INDIANS CRUSHED BY POLICE

YESTERDAY was again a day of surprises in the local Lawn Bowls League, the Bowling Green Club receiving their second setback within a fortnight—they were severely trounced by the Recreio at King's Park by 27 shots—while Taikoo were very surprisingly beaten in the Second Division by the Footballers, who won by four shots!

The Indian Recreation Club, who supplied last week's sensation by beating the Bowling Green Club, were overwhelmed by the Police, while the champions, Craigenower "A," continued in winning vein against the Kowloon Cricket Club. The Electricians and the Police tied in the Second Division with 58 shots each.

In recording the highest rink win of the season—46-11—C. G. Silva's four (J. E. Noronha, C. H. Basto, and F. V. V. Ribeiro) scored on every one of the 21 heads except the fourth, twelfth, eighteenth, and nineteenth. They registered a six and two fives! Hughie Nish's vanquished four registered seven of their 11 shots on the fourth head!

Other rinks to record sixes were J. L. Shellshear's C.S.C.C. four, J. Hollidge's C.S.C.C. four, G. E. F. Thompson's Bowling Green quartette, and J. Shepherd's Police rink, who won by 19 shots.

BOWLS CORRECTION

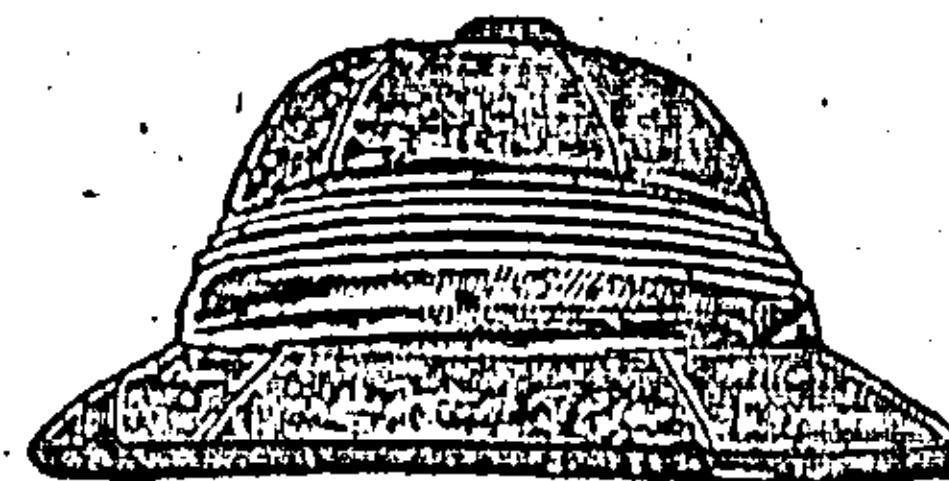

Owing to a mistake by one of the markers the Club de Recreio juniors were not credited with a win against the Civil Service at King's Park last Saturday. The error originated in the encounter between the rinks skipped by F. X. Soares and A. O. Brown, the scores of 20-9 being reversed. The correct result of the match was: Recreio 67 Civil Service 45.

WHEN BIG SHIPS GO AGROUND

Wonderfully Few Mishaps

Difficult Entry To Southampton

DREADED BRAMBLE BANK IN THE SOLENT

(By HECTOR BYWATER)

THE grounding of the Aquitania serves as a reminder that the normal difficulties of navigation in restricted waters have been much increased by the phenomenal growth in liner dimensions. Every advance in length, draught, and height of freeboard carries with it a new element of risk.

Even in perfect conditions of visibility, wind and tide it is no light task to pilot a 900ft. ship, drawing 34ft. of water, through such a narrow fairway as the Solent and turn her gently but firmly, at the psychological moment, "round the corner" at Calshot Castle into the straight.

The marvel is not that mishaps do sometimes occur, but that they remain so comparatively infrequent. At a conservative estimate 200 big liners, from 20,000 tons upward, enter and leave Southampton every year. Yet a full 12 months may pass without a single untoward incident.

On the other hand, a spell of bad luck may supervene, as in the early part of 1931, when three big liners, Mauretania, Berengaria and Statendam, grounded in the space of eight weeks.

Nightmare In Fog

The Bramble Bank, where the Aquitania and many other great ships before her went on the mud, bears an evil reputation. It lies to the south-east of Calshot Castle, a shifting bed of mud and submerged trees over which the double tides that flow up Southampton Water play incessantly, creating new shallows here, depositing mud in fresh places, and always tending to silt up the adjacent fairway.

Dredgers are continually at work keeping the ship channel at a more or less constant depth of 38ft. But new banks may crop up almost overnight, despite the vigilance exercised by Trinity House.

Many liner captains and other master mariners have emphasised to me the "trickiness" of Southampton's western approaches. Navigation there is intricate enough in fine weather; in fog it is sheer nightmare. Yet to anyone with no responsibility for the ship it is both thrilling and instructive to stand on the navigating bridge of a liner while she is being conned up the Solent.

The pilot is there, of course—and I may add that all Southampton pilots are picked men—but he cannot deputise for the captain, upon whom all responsibility must ultimately rest.

To a ship making for Southampton all is plain sailing till she approaches the Needles, but from then onward the utmost caution and skill are requisite. She proceeds at reduced speed and soon reaches the narrow dottle between Albert Fort (I. of W.) and Hurst Castle. This looks an awkward, not to say dangerous passage, but in fine, clear weather it is safe enough.

A Hairpin Bend

The ship, now in the Solent, has a fairly clear run as far as Egypt Point in Cowes Roads, but she is approaching the really critical stage of her journey. The biggest liners using the eastward passage to Southampton through Spithead have made an abrupt turn to starboard off Cowes to reach this same vital spot. Whichever passage has been used, the liner must now turn to port to enter the channel leading to Southampton Water. Moving very slowly, she noses her way into the dredged fairway. The buoys which mark it on either side seem horribly close together when viewed from the broad decks of a 45,000-ton ship; and, indeed, the channel here is scoured out between endless banks of mud—submerged, but for that reason more dangerous—which constitute an over-present ambush.

Foot by foot the ship forges ahead until the Thorn Knoll bank, an outpost of the dreaded Bramble, is passed. This is the critical moment at which she must make a sharp turn to port, for here the channel alters its direction almost at right angles. It is a simple enough manoeuvre with a medium-sized ship, but not so easy when it means "gentling" a 900ft. hull, displacing 63,000 tons (that being the Aquitania's weight) round a hairpin bend, with only yards to spare on either side, and perhaps a 45-mile wind thrusting hard against the skyscraper hull like the irresistible pressure of a giant's hand.

Once Mud Is Touched

A sudden squall, or even a slight vagary of the tide, may swing stem or stern a few feet in the wrong direction. Once mud has been touched the inertia of the ship will tend to drive her deep into the soft but treacherous bed, for moments must elapse ere the backward thrust of the screws, however swiftly they have been reversed, begins to check the way of the massive hull.

The fact that, although many great ships have gone ashore at this notorious patch of the Bramble Bank, no vessel has been lost there in recent times, or even delayed more than a few days, is due partly to the yielding nature of the bank itself, but still more perhaps, to the prompt and highly efficient aid always rendered by the Southampton tugs.

The first step is to lighten the ship. This is speedily accomplished by pumping out her oil, or, as has been done in some cases, transferring the contents of the forward bunkers to those amidships and astern. That done, ship and tugs wait for high tide, when the vessel's own engines are put astern, and at a signal all tugs heave and strain together.

Then, as generally happens, the bows begin to slide out of the mud in which they have been embedded, the ship gives a susceptible quiver of relief to find herself fully water-borne again, and the engines are stopped lest too forcible a thrust astern should carry her into the opposite bank.

Mishaps Are Rare

It must be repeated that for every mishap that does occur in the Solent and Southampton fairway many hundreds of perfectly safe passages are made. Whether it would be feasible to reduce the present risks of navigation in these waters is a point on which there is some diversity of opinion among seamen and port authorities. The dredging of a wider channel to smooth out in some measure the sharpness of the bend off Calshot would no doubt be practicable, but it would also be very expensive.

If, as seems probable, the dimensions of all liners which will be future use Southampton continue to increase, the problem will become more acute. The Queen Mary, for instance, is over 100ft. longer than the Aquitania, nearly 20,000 tons heavier, and offers a proportionately larger area of hull surface to the wind.

Yet it goes without saying that the peculiar difficulties of the Southampton channel were fully realised and weighed when the design of the Queen Mary was approved.

HONG KONG, SUNDAY MAY 12, 1935.

Westminster Hall

THE newspapers have had something to say about the wonderful transmission of the King's speech on Thursday, not through Duventry this time, but direct from the marvellously representative gathering in Westminster Hall. They have had a few words about the Hall itself. But it does not seem to have struck their imagination that the two facts should have been combined,—the most marvellous of modern inventions for carrying the voice of a man speaking in the most natural tones to millions unnumbered, from the same spot and within the same walls that have heard such very different deliveries. Not only the British Empire, but Europe and North America, listened in and what they heard was no assertion of authority, but a new and quite obviously genuine vow of continued consecration to that ideal of service which has been used in the Acts of Parliament conferring self-government on many Colonies to cover the whole functions of a well-managed administration,—“the peace, order, and good government of the people.” “My grandmother,” “my father,” “my dear wife”;—no other monarch could so easily drop into the familiar phrases that reminded one that for a century the family relationship has been the nearest analogy in spite of any differences of temperament.

But the choice of Westminster Hall for the scene was as notable as the occasion itself. No other hall could have served the purpose. It has often been justly complained that Britannic subjects have found in London a lack of imagination and tact that has made some strenuous self-assertion necessary and left sore feelings behind; a good example is some of the comments in English Reviews on the Statute of Westminster, which is a far more generous document than Magna Charta ever was. Westminster Hall is not, of course, where either House of the English Parliament meets. To have attended a meeting of the English Parliament would have been fatal to the careers of the Dominion statesmen, for it would have laid them open to all sorts of suspicions. The gathering would have led to recriminations that would have defeated its object. The original Parliament of the days of the “Concilium Magnum” met on the spot, and some of the old masonry remains. The Hall itself was built some centuries ago, and Parliament met there when it was merely English, and did not include Scotland. It was here that the great trials on a Bill of Attainder and Impeachment, such as Strafford's, were held, and it was here that Charles I was brought to answer the charge of levying troops against his own subjects. New accommodation was built for the Lords and Commons, and eventually was destroyed by fire, which damaged only the roof of the old Hall. The present roof is of massive and seasoned oak beams of impressive grandeur of design. Before the fire, when discussed for Parliament, the Hall was the scene of the meetings of the highest Courts, the House of Lords and the Privy Council; it was here that Burke thundered against Warren Hastings for alleged plunder of the Begums of Oude, who are now considered to have been grasping old ladies that had embezzled large sums of money really due to their own State and the East India Company. It would be too long to enumerate all the great judgments given that have formed leading cases ever since; but one may just recall that at an earlier date it was here that Francis Bacon, one of the greatest of legal thinkers, yielded to his “last infirmity” of love of money, and destroyed his fair fame.

Since the new Law Courts were built in Fleet Street the Hall has stood empty, except for small parties of tourists who wander round to inspect the frescoes on the walls that commemorate the great days of history. Benches and dais and Chair of State would have to be moved in specially for the occasion; but the greatest care of the fabric has been taken, and a few years ago Professor Lethaby, had much old stone that had “rotted” with the smoke fumes of modern industry removed and carefully replaced with new stone from the same quarry.

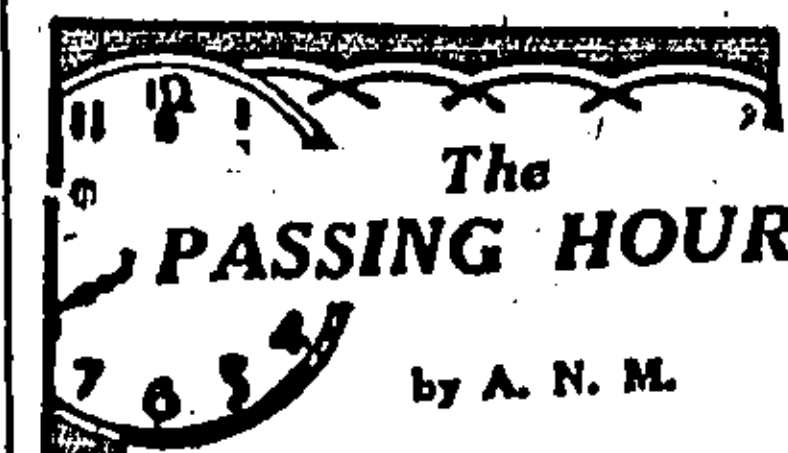

Here then Lords and Commons could meet, all suggestion of party politics could be eliminated by having the Houses represented by the Lord Chancellor and the Speaker, and without the slightest sacrifice of their own equal status the Dominion Premiers could attend; great Indian Princes no doubt wore their wonderful robes of state, and Dependencies like the Isle of Man or the Channel Islands, which have their own ancient Parliaments, sat beside the Colonials that have “representative” institutions only.

The Hall is like some of the English Institutions; it bears witness to the unwisdom of pulling down and destroying things that may seem to have lost their immediate usefulness. All could feel that it was an honour to meet for such a purpose in such a place, with one sad exception. The only refusal was sent by the Irish Free State, whose dignity might have been compromised.

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN

WHEN Rudyard Kipling exhorted the young men of his day to “take up the white man's burden” he was preaching an inspiration and an ideal of protection to the weak that finds an echo in that fine passage of the King's speech where he thanked God that so many different peoples over so large a portion of the world's surface could live quietly “none daring to make them afraid.” Our youngest critics, suckled on Freudian psychology, tell us that all control of alien races creates an “inferiority complex,” and brand the white man's burden as only another piece of Victorian hypocrisy. We must needs in this question “clear our minds of cant,” and it may be admitted that even if it be an exaggeration to say that the Empire was acquired “in a fit of absence of mind,” it is also true that much of it was taken over with a very light heart and no searchings of conscience at all. The growth of a sense of moral responsibility has been intermittent, but on the whole continuous; the best feature of public opinion on the subject has been that the aberrations have been soon admitted, and penance done. There are far more serious obstacles to a happy life than any sort of political complex derived from a wish for self-assertion, such as the fears of robbery and torture and faction strife; but the feeling of the day is that men on the whole wish more to be governed by their own people than to be better governed by strangers. Hence the steady tendency to decentralisation, so long as it can be done without endangering the working of the machine as a going concern.

CONFIDENCE

IN these days,” to quote the King again, “when fear and the preparation for war are again astir in the world,” what is wanted is “confidence.” “The British Empire,” said a Cabinet Minister the other day, has survived by taking reasonable risks.” To expect absolute security is like worrying at nights over an investment in Consols. I heard a good example of needless worry last week. A friend was told that quite a large contingent was coming down from one of the nearby ports for the Jubilee; and that as they could not know anything about Jubilee they could only mean to make a riot. What they actually did was to march in the procession with their own banners. It happened that a block of traffic caused a halt when they were passing, and the friend who had been warned of the riot began to examine some of the musical instruments. The “procession” there and then instead of taking the chance of a rest played a tune to show how they worked; and it was noticed that they all wore badges with embossed characters signifying “health and felicity to the King and Queen of”

EVOLUTION OF THE SEADROME

DREAM OF 20 YEARS REALISED

THEORIES PROVED SOUND AND PRACTICABLE

THE idea of constructing floating islands as refuges for aircraft is not of recent conception, and the name seadrome, which represents the result of twenty years of experiment and research by Mr. Edward Armstrong—a prominent engineer and one of America's pioneer aviators—has in consequence become universally known recently.

The seadrome, as visualised by its sponsors, is a large steel pier, 1,500 feet long, 150 feet wide at the ends and 300 feet at the centre, supported by thirty-two streamlined pillars, and standing 103 feet above sea-level. Waves pass harmlessly through the pillars in the same way as through the pillars of a pier at the seaside. Although the pillars do not extend to the ocean bed they are almost as stationary as though they did; they do in fact descend to a point approximately 40 feet below sea-level, where they expand into large air chambers which give the whole structure its buoyancy. Below the air chambers the pillars continue to ballast tanks 208 feet below sea-level, the pillars themselves containing water ballast from the air chambers downwards.

Theories Proved

By this arrangement the centre of gravity is always maintained below the centre of buoyancy, and the main volume of the entire structure is actually floating in almost calm water below the area of wave disturbance on the surface; in fact, only approximately two per cent, represented by the sections of the pillars actually in the waves, is subject to surface motion.

The engineering theories involved have been proved by the construction and testing of various models, ranging from small scale models to others 31 feet high, weighing many tons. Their performance has been approved by the United States Navy Department and favourably received by naval engineers of other nations. The experiments have been investigated by Lloyd's, and insurance has been provided to cover the seadromes throughout the various phases of their construction and towing, as well as while they are in service.

Ideal For Planes
The seadromes will not be anchored directly to the bottom of the ocean; they will be attached by surface cables to a specially designed buoy, which, in turn, will be anchored to the ocean bed. By this arrangement the seadrome will always lie down wind, thereby giving ideal conditions for landing and take-off. Air fins, automatically operated by the wind, have been designed to produce this result.

Although the seadrome will weigh 67,000 tons, including its ballast, the openwork structure is such that, during the worst North Atlantic storm conditions of 70 m.p.h. wind and currents of 1½ knots, the total pull of the seadrome will be but 100,000 lbs., whereas the cables attaching it to its buoy will be capable of withstanding over ten times this pull. Nevertheless, four 500-h.p. electric engines are provided at one end with a total thrust of 100,000 lbs., which will be automatically operated.

The local Mongoose

IN these notes the following members of the great cat family, Felidae, have been described:—The Chinese Tiger-cat (Notes 88 and 89), the Little Spotted Civet (Note 93), the Indian Civet (Note 95) and the Gem-faced Civet (Note 162). A living specimen of the last of the local smaller cat-like animals has now been given to me. In South China there is, I believe, only one species of Mongoose, the Crab-eating Mongoose, Herpestes urva (Hodgson). One of these, about 20 inches long, including tail, ran into a University building last week and was given to me; an interesting addition to the University fauna. The Mongoose differs from the Civet cat not only in colour—the tail is not ringed and the body and tail are self-coloured and lack prominent black or white marks—but also in shape, being much more attenuated, weasel-shaped. The legs are short, the toes straight and furnished with non-retractile claws and the tail is long and tapering. This shape enables the animal to penetrate holes in search of crabs and snakes. The plural is mongooses not mongoose!

Flowering Shrubs

Many attractive flowering shrubs and climbers are now in blossom; in fact this is probably the best season in the whole year for flowers. Unfortunately owing to the heat and high humidity people are disinclined to tramp the hillsides in search of them—not that much search is necessary, for half the shrubs are in flower. Tai Po is a particularly good district and if a halt is made by the roadside a mile or two before the descent to the sea and a few steps taken down the hillside on the seaward side a variety of flowers may be found. A good plan is to have a large jug of water in the car to receive the flowers, for if they are not placed immediately into water they will wilt and never recover.

White flowers predominate in number of species though not perhaps in number of individuals. The most conspicuous is a species of Melodinus, a climbing shrub with masses of sweet-smelling white flowers with yellowish centres. The flower has curious petals, the general effect being reminiscent of a toy propeller. Another shrub with fragrant white flowers is Gardenia florida. Buddha's lamp, Mussaenda pubescens and M. coccinea, has a small yellow flower with a large conspicuous white sepal resembling a primitive oil lamp. This climbing shrub is flowering profusely in the Tai Po district. Bauhinia glauca, a climbing species with flowers, white or tinged pink, with bright pink stamens, is still in full flower. The leaves are typical Bauhinia leaves, two-lobed.

Of the pink flowered shrubs by far the most abundant is Rhodomyrtus tomentosa, the Rose Myrtle, an erect shrub with symmetrical flowers each with numerous stamens and with 5 pink or purplish pink petals. The flowers fade to a paler pink or even white on ageing. Meibomia means black mouth; one species, a creeping plant, M. repens, has edible purplish fruits which stain the lips deeply. The two common shrubs of this genus are M. candidum and M. sanguineum. The flower of the former typically has 5 or 6 petals; that of the latter, which is larger, 6 to 8 petals, usually 7. The leaves of M. candidum are smooth and silky; those of M. sanguineum have stiff red bristles. The colour of the flowers is a purplish pink.

Additional note on Mongoose
Whilst I was engaged in writing these notes a friend arrived with a large dead specimen of Elathe radiata, the Three-knotted-string-snake, Sam sok sin. This was dangled in front of the mongoose but he showed no interest; perhaps he would have done so if the snake had been alive.

LEPER ORDINANCE DRAFTED

Sequel To Committee Report

METHOD OF TREATMENT ENTIRELY CHANGED

The draft has been published of a new Ordinance dealing with the treatment of lepers, framed in accordance with the recommendations of the Committee on Lepers, which will shortly be submitted to the Legislative Council.

Under the terms of the new Ordinance, a leper settlement or asylum will no longer be regarded as a kind of prison, but, in view of the greater medical knowledge of the disease, as a centre of treatment and a refuge for severe cases or those abandoned by their relatives.

Magisterial powers are not given to the persons in charge of the settlements as it is considered safe for leper offenders to be brought before ordinary tribunals. Should it be found necessary, in any particular case where isolation is necessary, to impose a term of imprisonment, arrangements can now be made for such isolation in prison.

Former Ordinance Repealed
The new Ordinance repeals the Ordinance of 1910. By section 2 the Governor-in-Council may appoint places to be leper settlements. The former provision in section 2 of Ordinance No. 24 of 1910 forbidding private asylums has not been re-enacted as it is intended to entrust the management of leper settlements to suitable missionary or philanthropic bodies.

Section 3 enables the Governor-in-Council to make regulations for the better carrying out of the provisions of the Ordinance, and for the well-being of the leper settlements and the inmates thereof.

Not Expressly Notifiable
The Ordinance does not expressly make leprosy a notifiable disease as sufficient provision for that purpose is made by the powers conferred on the Governor in Council by section 3 (2) (b) of the Public Health (Quarantine and Prevention of Disease) Ordinance No. 12 of 1935 which is to be brought into force shortly by Proclamation. Under section 2 of that Ordinance leprosy is included in the definition of "disease."

Section 5 deals with segregation in cases where the Director of Medical and Sanitary Services deems it necessary. It is now realised that segregation is not essential in all cases of leprosy which by modern methods of treatment may be cured at an early stage and mitigated at all stages.

Section 6 provides that when lepers are detained in the settlements they shall not leave without the written permission of the officer in charge.

Section 7 controls alien leper immigration, while Section 8 deals with the appointment of Justices of the Peace as visitors of leper settlements.

ST. JOHN AMBULANCE BRIGADE

Forthcoming Sale Of Work

The Headquarters of the St. John Ambulance Association and Brigade will be thrown open to the public next Friday at 4 p.m.

The Nursing Divisions have donated a "doll stall," "cushion stall," "beach stall," baby clothing etc., the proceeds to be devoted towards the St. John Hospitals' maternity centres and dispensaries in the New Territories.

Visitors will not be pressed to buy, but as each article is only to cost a few cents more than cost price they will find it difficult to resist buying a First Aid outfit for the beach, or an exquisitely dressed doll, cushion, or baby's frock, all of which are handmade by the nurses.

PRETTY WEDDING AT ROSARY CHURCH

Portuguese Families United

PINNA—BRITTO

The Rosary Church was yesterday the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Yolanda dos Merlins Britto, the third daughter of the late Mr. J. M. Britto and Mrs. Lina Soares Britto, became the bride of Mr. Luiz Gonzaga de Pinna, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. de Pinna of Messrs. Harry Wicking and Company. The Rev. Father R. Rossi officiated.

The bride, who was given away by her eldest brother, Mr. F. M. Britto, looked charming in a gown of white satin crepe trimmed with white roses, which had a long white train. She carried a bouquet of arum lilies.

The bride's sister, Miss Alda Britto, and Miss Ern Xavier, attended as bridesmaids and were dressed in neat ensembles of blue organdy. They carried similar bouquets to that of the bride. The bride's mother wore a flowered gorgette dress.

Master Jerry de Pinna, the groom's nephew, was the page boy, and was dressed in a white satin suit.

The duties of Bestman were carried out by Mr. F. R. Sequeira, while Mr. H. J. Silva was the Groomsman.

Reception At Club de Recreio
After the ceremony the reception was held at the Club de Recreio, where dancing was indulged in to the strains of the Troubadours jazz band. Nearly 400 guests attended the reception.

At the conclusion of the reception the happy couple left for Canton, where they are spending their honeymoon, following which they will proceed to Macao.

For her going-away dress the bride chose a very pretty blue albino silk dress with hat and veil to match.

WEDDING BELLS AT UNION CHURCH

A pretty wedding was solemnised at the Union Church, Kennedy Road, yesterday afternoon, when Miss M. D. Glover, of Sydney, New South Wales, Australia, became the bride of Mr. C. J. Van Es, an officer in the Chinese Maritime Customs and formerly of the Java China Japan Line.

The bride, who arrived at the church on the arm of Mr. Fred Sulzbach was dressed in white satin and gorgette and carried a bouquet of white lilies. Mrs. Harvey was the Matron of Honour, while the duties of best man were carried out by Mr. D. Campbell, also of the Chinese Maritime Customs.

A number of the couple's close friends attended the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. E. G. Powell, including several officers from J.C.L. and C.M.C. ships. After the wedding a reception was held in the Jacobean room of the Hong Kong Hotel and the couple then left to spend their honeymoon at Repulse Bay.

PEPPER ATTACK IN DUDELL STREET ON MAY 2

Chan Yau Cheong, a shop foki, appeared on remand before two magistrates, Mr. W. Schofield and Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen, at the Central Police Court yesterday morning, charged with the theft of a handbag containing $6.30, a pair of spectacles, and a cheque from the person of Mrs. Florence Eva Thornhill in Duddell Street on May 2.

He was found guilty and sentenced 18 months' hard labour and 20 strokes of the birch, or an additional six months if found unfit for birching.

Pepper Attack

Detective M. Murphy, for the prosecution, said that Mrs. Thornhill was returning from a cinema on May 2 at about 9.20 p.m. When she was mounting the steps at the top of Duddell Street defendant threw pepper in her face and snatched her bag. There was a struggle during which Mrs. Thornhill fell to the ground. She shouted for help, upon which defendant threw away the bag and ran up the steps to Ice House Street, where he was arrested by an Indian constable and brought to the Central Police Station. At the Station his finger nails were clipped and together with his coat they were sent to the Government Analyst, who would say that he found pepper present.

Mrs. Thornhill bore out the Inspector's statements.

Defendant Calls Witnesses

Further evidence was given by Mr. A. Jackson, the Government Analyst, Sergeant Baldwin, and the Indian constable who arrested accused.

Asked if he had any witnesses to call defendant replied that he would like to call his master and a friend who would testify as to his character.

Evidence was given by these two men, but failed to prevent conviction.

Life's Ceaseless Struggle

Spiritual Combat To Overcome Evil

Fighting "The Good Fight Of Faith"

(By Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan)

OF all the metaphors that have been used to describe the life of man, most of us will agree that the nearest approximation to the truth is that of warfare. It is one long battle, one long conflict, that begins with life itself and does not finish until life is done.

The child that is born into the world with a poor and sickly physique has to battle for its very life in its infant days, and many are the stories that could be told of a devoted father's and mother's fight to preserve that young life committed to their charge.

There come the days of school, and the fight to get into the teams of sport, the fight (amongst some, at any rate) to get to the top, and stick there, and that (amongst most healthy children) of dodging the things they do not like, when the open-air is calling and the lure of games.

Ceaseless Struggle

Then when school days are over there comes the toughest fight of all—the struggle to get our bread and butter. And if we want jam on only one side, we have to fight for it even harder. The vast amount of unemployment in the industrial, and even the professional, classes in the world to-day tells its own story of the bitterness of the conflict to make good, the ruthlessness of the fight to feed a wife and family when times of industrial depression set in.

History tells the same tale—one long series of wars and battles since the beginning of time. In the dim dawn of human life there were the battles which man with his puny strength had to wage against the giant mammals and ferocious reptiles which roamed the earth at their will. The job in those grim days was not how to get your breakfast, but how to avoid becoming one. When things 50 feet long, with steel knobs all down their backs, and a couple of spikes doing duty for a nose, were ambling around looking for their breakfasts, if a man could not do the 100 yards in less than even time his only chance was to pose as a piece of the landscape and hope for the best.

No Peace

There came the day, when man won that seemingly unequal combat. The ounce of brain and pluck were worth more than the pound of mere weight, unaided by intelligence. Then came the family life and soon afterwards that of the clan. From clan to tribe was but a step, and all the time life was filled with the conflicts of men, to preserve their independence and their liberty, or to punish others who could learn their lesson in no other way.

When we come, in the process of time, to nations we find the same story. There is not one nation whose history has not been written with the life-blood of her sons on

It is notified in the Government Gazette that Notice to Mariners No. 74/1934 of September 12, 1934, regarding guide posts in the Harbour, has been cancelled, the posts having been removed.

Mr. Victor Hugo Gives Two Siamese Jugglers A Chance

Two Siamese jugglers who lost their faith in managers when their manager absconded with all their money shortly after they had arrived in the Colony recently, leaving them with a hotel bill which they were unable to pay, have regained their confidence in these gentlemen since Mr. Victor Hugo, manager of the Oriental Theatre, took steps to free them from the House of Detention and give them a chance to prove their worth in his theatre.

Last week they presented themselves at the Central charge-room and told their tale of woe with dramatic gestures. They were detained pending negotiations for their return to Siam, without clothes or stage effects, which were seized by the hotel management to defray their expenses.

Mr. Hugo is going to pay their fares to Bangkok and they will appear at the Oriental Theatre tomorrow at 11 a.m.

"I've seen their act, and it's a darned sight better than a lot of these so-called top-notchers who wander through here," Mr. Hugo said.

It is a strange that Christianity itself has not been able to prevent wars between nations that profess and call themselves Christian,—simply because ingrained into the very substance of man there is implanted the impulse to fight and, if needs be, to die rather than give up their freedom and their liberty, or to help those who cannot defend themselves.

To-day we have come to realise that there must be some other way possible to settle international complications than the old method of instant assumption of arms as the final arbitrament of world diplomacy. But until humanity reaches perfection, no nation dares to leave itself unprotected.

"The Good Fight"

The idea of warfare comes up again and again in St. Paul's Epistles. To him, life was certainly a battle-ground, a never-ending conflict, within him and around. When he was writing to Timothy, his young convert in the Faith, he told him to "Fight the good Fight of Faith," and to "lay hold on eternal life." The grand old warrior was nearing the end of life's journey. He had indeed fought the good fight, he had finished the course, he had kept the Faith; and now he was sitting in his prison cell in Rome, with the shadow of death very close about his head.

On his tired body he bore the marks of many trials and persecutions, which he had received in the service of the Lord he had loved ever since the day he had met Him on the road to Damascus. Now he is waiting for his crown of life. The young man must have read those Epistles with all the respect of a raw recruit for one who has taken part in many historic events, and been in many great campaigns.

Years passed on, and the young man made good as the first Bishop of the Church at Ephesus, and passed on too to his reward. But those words of St. Paul still live, and they ring again in our ears this morning. "Fight the good Fight of Faith." The point is, exactly what kind of a fight are we putting up? Are we fighting at all?

Advance Or Retreat

There is no standing still in this particular conflict. We are either in the thick of it, or else we are clean outside it. We are either pulling our weight on the side of the things that really matter, throwing the whole measure of our influence on the side of right and truth and honour and all that is clean and straight in life and its affairs, or else we are on the other side.

God Almighty cannot wave a magic wand across the sky and say that from this moment all sin and sorrow and suffering in the world shall cease. He has to rely on human agents to do it for Him. To each one of us, no matter how small and insignificant we may seem to be, He has given some part which we must play, some bit of the fight that we must take. If we fail, then that part will never be done, because nobody else can do it. That is why our own personal contribution is so vitally important.

Each new day sees some fresh opportunity, which if we miss, has gone for ever. So:—

Fight the good fight with all thy might,
Christ is thy strength, and Christ
thy right;
Lay hold on life and it shall be
Thy joy and crown eternally.

POOR QUALITY CANE HALTS SUGAR REFINERIES

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canton, Yesterday.

Foreign cement has no longer a chance to push its sale in the Canton market owing to the Government cement manufactured in Salchuen, declared Mr. Chen Yuen-ying, director of the Kwangtung Products Sales Bureau.

He stated that the Sai Chuen plant is turning out 3,000 barrels of cement a day and that the demand is good. "As business is encouraging," Mr. Chen said, "control of production is unnecessary."

Mr. Chen stated that the sale of tungsten has now been taken over by the First Group Army, as this mineral is useful for military purposes. The exploitation department of the First Group Army is in charge of the sale of this mineral, he said.

Work in the Sun Cho and Shih Tou sugar refineries has been suspended owing to the poor quality of sugar cane available at this time of year.

ed by dynamometers in the cable itself if a dangerous tension should, in unforeseen circumstances, develop in the cable, thereby driving the seadrome towards the buoy and releasing the tension on the cable.

Four Decks

In order that the flight deck may be unobstructed, three additional decks are provided. The first of these, 12 feet below the flight deck, will have accommodation for passengers and operating personnel. Twenty-eight feet below this deck provision is made for hangar space for aeroplanes and all necessary inspection, testing and repair facilities and working. Below is the bottom deck which will house all the necessary machinery for generating power for the motors, radio beacons, radio telephone, meteorological services, flood-lighting and illuminating.

It is planned to anchor five seadromes between Europe and America at distances of approximately 500 miles from each other and from the coast. This is considered appropriate, having regard to the type of equipment contemplated and the functioning of the personnel. The seadromes will follow a route passing north-west of Cape Finisterre, continuing north of the Azores Islands, and then more or less in a direct line to New York. This is one that is singularly free from fog—the average experienced in the past being two days in the year; the temperatures vary between 50deg.C. in the winter and 70deg.C. in the summer. A chain service of aircraft will be maintained, each machine doing only the one hop, the passengers transferring to different aircraft at each seadrome. Emergency equipment will, as far as can be ascertained, be used, and relief aircraft and fast sea-cutters will be maintained for use if aircraft are brought down on the water.

Minimum of Hazard

It is claimed therefore that the hazards over the proposed North Atlantic route will be less than these along the average land route of similar length.

Although it is possible that at some time in the next 15 or 20 years aeroplane research will have reached such a point that machines will be developed with half the fuel consumption per horse-power and of half the weight of materials, the use of such machines, refuelling at seadromes every 500 miles, will give greater pay loads than would be possible on a non-stop Bermuda-Azores flight. It is consequently claimed by the sponsors that the non-stop machine visualised could not afford to compete with those using the seadromes for refuelling and thereby securing a maximum pay load.

In illustration of this fact it is pointed out that the average four-engined (2,300-h.p.) flying-boat weighing 17 tons can lift 12,000 lbs.; the fuel and crew and their requirements for a 500-mile flight weigh 5,600 lbs., leaving 6,400 lbs. of pay load.

This same machine, refuelled for a 1,000-mile flight, will have a pay load of but 1,120 lbs., or less than one fifth the pay load if it refuels at the end of 500 miles. The same machine, refuelled for 1,250 miles, exceeds its lifting capacity by 1,440 lbs. and cannot leave the ground.

SOUTH CHINA BEAT THE REST

McHugh Injured
McHugh, in the pivotal position, gave a sound display in the attack and in his clearance until he received a fast-rising ball in the stomach in the early stages of the game which appeared to put him off his game for the remainder of the match.

The wingers, Cheng Sul-hong and M. Sabhan, were the pick of the Rest team, and were ably supported by Howlett, but, owing to the poor support received from Duncan in the attack—he missed countless opportunities—they were passengers for the greater part of the game.

Playing with the sun behind them, the Lincolns opened the attack and Toyno nearly opened the score when he sent in a first-time drive from the wing to miss the upright by inches.

Lincolns Open Scoring

Exchanges became very even for a period with attacks on either goal. In a battle for possession of the ball, Settlers secured and sent in a great drive, but it was brought down by Harmsworth, who fumbled the ball badly in attempting to clear, and Rush, seizing the opportunity, ran forward to send in a fast shot from very close range to open the score.

The Rest now pressed and for a period were enjoying most of the play. M. Sabhan sent across a beautiful drop shot in front of goal only to see it badly missed by Duncan, the ball going out to Chueng Sul-hong, who sent over another lovely centre for Duncan and Sullivan to blunder.

M. Sabhan then received from Howlett and sent across a fast drive to Chueng Sul-hong, who sent in a first-time drive to find the net. Following the resumption the Rest pressed and Howlett sent in a hard shot to hit the upright, the ball going out to Eckersley who rushed in to score before Taylor had recovered, thus giving the Rest the lead.

Lincoln's Comeback

From then onwards the Lincolns settled down and had the Rest practically on the defensive for the remainder of the game. Forcing a corner, Toyno dropped a low shot to Wildy who made no mistake with a

YANKEES DEFEAT INDIANS

CHICAGO BOW TO BOSTON

New York, Yesterday.

Rain was again responsible for the cancellation of several baseball games, the entire National League programme for yesterday being postponed.

The Yankees caused a minor surprise when they beat the Indians by 3 runs in the American League. Lou Gehrig clouting his second four-bagger of the season, while the two other leaders, Chicago and Washington, were also beaten, Dahl Green opening his home run account with two home-runs off the White Sox.

Zeke Bonura hit his seventh home-run for the latter nine and is now only one run behind Bob Johnson (Philadelphia) in the American League home-run parade.

Results as cabled by Router, were:—

first-time drive to score the equaliser.

Following up, Settlers missed a certain goal when he ran through to beat the defence only to shoot high over the bar. A minute afterwards, however, Settlers sent in a fast ground shot to beat Harmsworth and give the Lincolns the lead and the match.

The Rest made another attempt to run through, but were held in check before the danger area was reached, and before the ball could be cleared the final whistle blew.

Lincolns: Taylor; Dobbs, Shaw; Chapman, Wildy; Ibbett; Clayton, Rush, Settlers, McGuinness and Toyno. The Rest: Harmsworth (East Lane); Slack (Engineers), Dudley (Engineers); Ng Ying-kay (Eastern), McHugh (Fusiliers), Eckersley (East Lane); Chueng Sul-hong (Eastern), Sullivan (Fusiliers), Duncan (Club), Howlett (Engineers) and M. Sabhan (Eastern).

The Chinese Recreation Club are making a strong bid for the title this year, and the comeback of Mrs. J. Litton, (nee Enid Lo), who will probably partner Ho Ka-lau, should add considerable interest to the event.

C.R.C. Very Strong

Lee Wai-long, the Chinese soccer idol, and an excellent singles player, will probably team with Mrs. Chiu Tsun-chiu, one of the finalists in the Open Mixed Doubles Championship, while the third pair will probably rest between Willis-Hung and Mrs. Lo Tung-fan, or Paul Kong and Miss Cheung Woon-wai. The Chinese meet the Kowloon Cricket Club "B" team, who have very sportingly entered, although they are by no means up to the strength of their seniors.

The K.C.C. "A" are a fairly strong combination. A. E. P. Guest will this year play with Miss A. MacKenzie, instead of Miss M. Griffiths, who will now partner E. F. Fincher.

"A" Division On Tuesday

The Men's "A" Division League commences on Tuesday when the holders, the Chinese Recreation Club "A" team, meet the Recreation "A" team.

The Chinese are almost certain to retain the League championship this year and have the following players at their disposal for the "A" Division:—Ho Ka-lau, Taul Wai-pui, Paul Kong, Lee Wai-long, Lu Tak-cheuk, W. C. Hung, Yew Nam-kit, Ng Tze-kwong and Ng Kam-chuen.

The Recreation are also fairly strong, and have entered two teams, A. V. Goanito and C. A. Barretto being the strongest pair.

The "B", "C", and "D" Divisions commence on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, respectively.

cipation. He was, however, well and truly beaten by the two goals scored against him, indeed few 'keepers' would have stopped those two almost impossible drives from Chan Tak-fai!

Chris Pile and Mak Sul-hon did not have the same understanding as did the Chinese pair of backs, but both worked well in their respective spheres, though Pile was too prone to dribble instead of clearing first-time. Mak Sul-hon pleased with his effortless clearances, and his tackling and head-work was well up to his customary good form.

Robertson Holds Chinese

Robertson, at right half, played one of the best games of his career. He was badly winded early on, and took time to recover, but he was always a good match for Lee Shek-yau and Tam Kong-pak. In hard tackling he excelled, and time and again he relieved a harassed defence by energetic 'mixing-in' and quick clearances up the field.

McGuire disappointed in the pivotal position. At no time did he appear to have the mark of Fung, and spent most of the afternoon in running round out of position. At times he did show glimpses of form with some well-judged passes, but his general display was well below his normal game.

Lai Kwok-chui was a tireless worker, but his dangerous habit of leaving Tso completely unmarked for the greater part of the game had disastrous results at times, throwing the defence right out of gear.

Weak Rest Forwards

The weakness in the Rest's side lay in the forwards. Failure to work together, and rank bad finishing and shooting made them an easy prey to the quick-thinking Lee Tin-sang and Lau Mau.

Howe was always too well watched to do anything on his own, and the remainder, whilst trying hard, failed to discover a method to draw the Chinese defence out of position. Bickford did not receive a great deal of the play, but was well on the mark with everything he attempted, showing a snap and polish that was missing from the other forwards. Moss, and Tommy Pile were genuine triers on the right-wing, but their trouble also lay in poor sense of shooting.

Moss Goes Close

Howe won the toss for the Rest, and Fung kicked off against the sun.

The Rest attacked at the onset, and Moss missed by inches with a grand drive. At the other end, Lee Shek-yau passed in to Fung, whose shot was well gathered by Rowlands. The exchanges were fast and exciting, and the ball was travelling quickly from one goal to the other. Twice Howe tested Wong with good drives, and Rowlands did well to hold a difficult shot by Tso from the wing.

The Rest were having slightly the better of the play at this point, and following a heated skirmish in the Chinese goalmouth, forced a corner on the right. Tommy Pile's kick went to Ridings, and the inside left shot hard first-time, the ball rebounding off the bar with Wong Wing unsighted and well beaten.

Chinese Take Lead

After 25 minutes, during which South China had settled down to their own particular style of swinging football, they took the lead through Chan Tak-fai. Fung King-cheong drew the defence and deftly slipped the ball forward to the inside right, whose terrific low cross-drive gave Rowlands no chance.

A minute later, Chan Tak-fai received from Tso and nearly increased the lead, Rowlands saving his point-blank drive in masterly fashion. A left-footed drive by Fung King-cheong was also cleverly saved by the Fusilier custodian, and the first half ended with South China pressing strongly.

Rest Equalise

Six minutes after the resumption, the Rest equalised. Ridings very cleverly sent Bickford away, and the winger's centre dropped right into Wong Wing's arms—or should have done! Wong, to everyone's surprise, missed the ball completely, and Howe dashed in and netted.

From this stage, the Rest played up well, Robertson being well in the picture with some splendid passes and robust tackling whenever play entered his side of the field. Once Bickford finished off a brilliant run with a terrific shot which struck the top corner of the upright, and a few seconds later, Moss was barely inches wide with a well-directed shot from about 15 yards.

Fung's Clever Move

The Rest gradually shot their bolt, however, and South China resumed the offensive, quickly taking the lead after a clever move by Fung King-cheong. Fung hesitated with the ball, an action which threw Pile and Mak Sul-hon right out of position, and then slipped the ball through the open centre to Chan Tak-fai, who drove it into the net just in the corner, well out of Howland's reach.

This completed the scoring, and the play deteriorated into a careless display of loose kicking and half-hearted efforts. South China retained their definite superiority, and should have scored on at least three other occasions, but Fung King-cheong took little care with his shots, sending high over the bar each time.

Wong's Full-Length Save

Just towards the end, Moss tried a long-range shot which caused Wong Wing to dive full-length to save, and the final whistle brought to an end a good game in which the champions played like champions, and were worthy victors.

Following a brief speech by Sir Thomas Southern, the cups were presented to the winning teams of the three Divisions by Lady Southern. The medals, not yet having been received, will be distributed later to the members of the successful teams.

South China "A":—Wong Wing; Leo Tin-sang, Lau Mau; Leung In-chun, Leung Wing-chui, Lee Kwok-wai; Tso Kwai shing, Chan Tak-fai, Fung King-cheong, Tam Kong-pak and Lee Shek-yau.

The Rest:—Rowlands; Mak Sul-hon, C. Pile; Robertson, McGuire, Lai Kwok-chui, T. Pile, Moss, Howe, Ridings and Bickford.

COAL DEPOSITS IN KWANGTUNG

Discovery Of Large New Field

TO BE EXPLOITED WITH IRON OF DISTRICT

Canton, Yesterday.

The Provincial Department of Reconstruction is contemplating the opening of coal mines in Kuo-tin-lo, Wun-tung-tu, Kang-fu-ling, and Leng-shu-ling, Chung-fa County, in the field which was recently found by the mining exploring corps of the Department. The coal reserve in these places has been figured as hundred millions of tons. Concrete schemes for the work will be mapped out as soon as the thorough survey of the fields is finished, which is now being made by the technical men of the Department.

Chung-fa is also famous for iron deposits. According to the Department, iron and coal mines will be opened simultaneously.

A temporary railway for transportation will be built from the mining district to the iron and steel plant which is now in process of construction.—Central Press.

INDIAN BALLET

Noted Dancer To Visit Hong Kong

ANCIENT ART OF INDIA REVIVED

(By V. S. CANAGA SINGHAM)

The art of Indian dancing is one of the noblest and most ancient, having in the past attained to a high state of perfection; and it was almost the most holy in ancient days. It was a sacred art and, according to the old traditions, was the first to be learned and mastered by all artists, because it taught the expression of culture, religious idealism, philosophy of life and harmony in human character. But this fine and noble art gradually fell into disrepute and was looked down upon by all so-called decent people and the holy exponents of the democratic religion.

Reviving An Art

But modern India is very grateful to Mrs. Leela Sokhey, who is known in the stage and public life as Menaka, for having come out with her zeal, devotion and courage to revive this almost forgotten art and lift it to a position which is worthy of its ancient respect and honour. Menaka is the daughter of a well-known landed proprietor of considerable influence in the Bengal Presidency, having been born of Brahman parentage in an Orthodox atmosphere. It is not easy for a member of such a family to revolt from family ties to take up an art which is considered by the average person to be unworthy of her class. While I was in Bombay in 1927, I had my first opportunity to witness her display of dancing, and the wonderful reception she received from the members of different communities of that city is still fresh in my memory. Menaka is tall, slim, elegantly graceful and cultured, and possesses all the charm and attractiveness which is consistent with the modern womanhood of India. She was a personal friend and favourite of Madam Pavlov, besides being a protégé of Cochran and a dancer of European reputation. She has travelled all over Europe and has been received by Royalties and had audience with Princes.

Wife Of Officer

She is the wife of Lieut.-Col. Sokhey, I.M.S., a well-known member of the Imperial Medical Service and a noted scientist. She may rightly be called an Ambassador of the Indian Renaissance, and I believe that people here will have an opportunity shortly to see her in person, appearing in some of the local theatres with her ballet during the course of a tour round the world.

Fourteen pupils of the Diocesan Boys' School were yesterday confirmed by the Bishop of Hong Kong, the Rt. Rev. R. O. Hall, in the school chapel.

The Rev. L. L. Nash, the school chaplain, assisted the Bishop in the service, while the Rev. H. W. Baines was also present.

The chapel was crowded with parents and friends, boarders, and day boys, and the following members of the staff:—Miss S. Bancroft, Mrs. Hassard and Messrs. E. C. Thomas, T. S. W. Chan, A. G. Prew, D. I. Luard, and A. Crawford.

England." The fact is that mutual confidence is usually justified, as it was last week. What the world wants is more of it.

THE JAMBORALLY

FIFTY years hence it will probably be the great gathering at Happy Valley that will be the most clearly remembered of all the celebrations. The young people who took part are just of the age when impressions are most vivid. It is a great improvement that colour and music and drill should be the means of catching the imagination and the memory, rather than the heavy feasts that were once popular, or the earlier barbarous custom of "beating the bounds." In the days when maps were not so frequent as they are now the village boys used to be taken round to what we should now call the "corner beacons" of the parish, and given a good thrashing at each so that there should be no doubt in their minds where the boundary ran. It does seem that nobody before Lord Baden Powell realised that the youthful head was even more impressionable than humbler parts of the body. I met Major Baden Powell, as he was then, in 1897, when he was going for a shooting expedition in Bechuanaland with the famous hunter F. C. Selous. He was sunburned from his voyage, wiry, and very fit; but he refused to leave Capetown until he had called on "the old lady." That was a wonderful old lady who presided over something like an eighteenth century salon. At the beautiful old house of Mrs. Koopmans de Wet, now preserved as a museum of old furniture and pictures, one could meet all the politicians and artists and big game hunters; and Major "B-P" produced a clay bust of Paul Kruger for inspection, that he had just finished. All that sort of social life disappeared in the Boer War, and has never been revived. But the fact that the Chief Scout was picking up has delighted the hearts of boys and girls the world round.

COMMUNIST ACTIVITY IN S.W. SZECHUEN

Several Districts Occupied

DOUBLE DRIVE ON CHENG TU THREATENED

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.

Several districts in South-western Szechuen have been occupied by the Reds during the past four days. They are stated to be moving northwards towards Sui Chang, which is about 80 miles south of Chengtu, the principal town in Western Szechuen.

Chinese press reports state that the Reds are making a second attempt to storm Chengtu both from the North and the South. The garrison commander of Chengtu is said to be recalling his men from outside for the protection of the city.

Nanking troops are still located in Northern Yunnan. General Hsieh Yoh, their commander, is in Yunnanfu on an important mission on behalf of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Forward Han, the bloodthirsty Red chieftain, and his band are roving in Northern Szechuen, waiting for a chance to drive South again. There are at least 150,000 anti-Communists in Szechuen, who should be able to wipe out the enemy by a concerted movement.

A column of Reds is attempting to invade Sikang, hoping thereby to make contact with other Communist forces.

TANGIER STATUTE REVISION

Better Safeguarding Of British Interests

London, Yesterday.

Steps are being taken by the British Government to approach other powers signatory to the 1923 Tangier Statute which is the instrument governing the administration of the International Zone.

This course is being followed owing to the fact that it is felt that British interests in the zone, and particularly in the port of Tangier, where they are more important than those of any other nationality, are inadequately safeguarded.

The Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, when questioned in Parliament, said that the position was regarded as unsatisfactory. It is understood that reforms will be sought in the financial and judicial services.—British Wireless Service.

THEIR MAJESTIES IN S.E. LONDON

Great Welcome On Surprise Visit

London, Yesterday.

Their Majesties the King and Queen paid a surprise visit this morning to Lambeth, Battersea, and Wandsworth to see the Jubilee decorations in some of the poorer districts south of the river.

News of the visit spread rapidly and Their Majesties, who travelled unobtrusively in a closed car, did not disguise their pleasure at the warm and spontaneous welcome they received from the people who thronged closely round the car as it proceeded at a walking pace.

During the afternoon the Queen drove through the West End of London.—British Wireless Service.

A minor quarrel, in which walking sticks were freely used, led to a serious fight between two Indians yesterday at 2 p.m. in Arsenal Street at Wanchai.

The two Indians, A. Mohamed and Ahmed Gull, were apparently on good terms with each other before the brawl took place and lived in the same house at No. 85, Lockhart Road.

HITLER MOUSTACHE SOLD FOR £1

Bavarian Enthusiasm Takes Queer Form

CELEBRATING RETURN TO CONSCRIPTION

Munich.

As a "gesture" to celebrate Germany's return to conscription a number of men in the village of Zepfendorf, North Bavaria, decided to auction their moustaches.

The proceeds, they arranged, should be sent to Berlin to help pay "military expenses."

A spirited auction took place. Prices started at 6s.

One man, with a moustache carefully clipped after the mode favoured by Herr Hitler, got a bid of £1.

After the auction the village barber removed all the sold moustaches, free of charge, and presented the hairs to the buyers.

The total proceeds, some £3, were sent to General von Blomberg, Minister of Defence.

The skeletons of a number of French soldiers killed in similar circumstances were discovered in a dug-out in the same area.

MURDERER'S CURSE

Condemned Criminal In Final Scene

HOPES HIS JUDGES WILL BE EXTERMINATED

Chalon-Sur-Saone.

"I hope war will break out and exterminate you all." This was the dying curse uttered at the foot of the guillotine by a murderer named Putigny, who was executed recently out side the prison here for killing his two daughters, aged 12 and two and a half years.

There were scenes in the death cell when the Public Prosecutor, accompanied by other officials, awoke Putigny from his sleep with the traditional phrase:

"Courage, Putigny, your last hour has come."

Putigny sprang wildly from his bed screaming curses against justice and against the magistrates. "It is shameful to guillotine me," he yelled. "I never harmed anyone. I hope war breaks out to exterminate you all who conspired for my death."

Putigny refused the glass of rum and cigarettes which are always offered to a condemned man before he is led to the guillotine.

FEVER FROM BITE OF CAT

Unusual Malady In England

FIRST CASE RECORDED SINCE 1924

The first case of cat-bite fever in England since 1924 is recorded by Drs. G. E. Beaumont and A. Morton Gill in the British Medical Journal.

The case quoted concerns a girl of 15 who was admitted to the Royal Masonic Hospital in November last year.

On September 3, while releasing a stray cat from a garage, she was bitten on the back of her leg. The wound was washed, painted with iodine and bandaged, and it rapidly healed.

The leg, however, began to swell.

The fever developed and with each wave the girl complained of drowsiness, stiffness in both arms and, to a lesser degree, in the legs, and loss of appetite. A rash followed.

The girl was cured and discharged from hospital on January 12 this year.

2,000 MILES' RIDE IN TAXICAB

Winnipeg To Chicago For Hockey Match

Gus Candace, a Winnipeg taxi-driver, has installed extra petrol tanks in his motorcar because he thinks it highly probable that some local "fan" might want to be driven to see a bull-fight in Mexico.

A priest, named Father Lovique, and two other men hired his taxi to take them to see an ice hockey match in Chicago, nearly 1,000 miles away.

The party left Winnipeg on Friday and reached Chicago in time to see the game. How much the motor registered when Candace returned the priest and his friends to Winnipeg has not been disclosed.

JOHORE'S SULTANA IN LONDON

Scottish-Born Wife Of Wealthy Ruler

LEGAL BUSINESS AVOIDED REASON FOR VISIT

London.

The Scottish-born Sultana of Johore, consort of one of the wealthiest rulers of the East, has been living in strict seclusion at a Park-lane, W., club since her arrival from Malaya.

She is visiting London alone on "legal business," the nature of which she refuses to discuss.

Although the Sultana is usually seen about a good deal during her visits to London, on this occasion she has not ventured from her suite. No one except an occasional close friend is permitted to see her.

When she left Malaya it was stated that she was returning home for "health reasons." It is understood, however, that, except for a slight nervous disorder, the Sultana is not indisposed.

Her marriage to the Sultan of Johore, ruler over 7,500 square miles of territory, took place in London in 1930. She was then Mrs. Helen Wilson, former wife of the son of a State physician in Johore. In the following year she was presented at Court, and her jewels made her one of the most striking figures in the brilliant assembly.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Following Your Partner's Lead

WHAT does my partner's lead indicate? This is a question you will often have to answer for yourself when you are playing the defensive role against a suit contract.

It is, of course, very difficult to formulate any hard and fast rule which will enable you to decide exactly what your partner's lead may mean, especially when the card is an 8 or a 7 or a 6. It may be clear from the cards which you see in the dummy and from your own holding that the lead obviously comes from a short suit. However, you do not know yet whether the lead was from a singleton or doubleton or from a three-card suit. As a matter of fact, experience goes to prove that it is probably better to assume that the lead is from a doubleton.

It is possible your partner may even have led an honour, such as a Knave, but in any case, if you have made up your mind that your partner has led from a short suit, then the card which you should play on the first trick will depend upon the honour combinations in dummy and in your own hand. You cannot rely on your partner having any tricks in the suit and, therefore, the number of tricks which you make in that suit will depend upon your own effort.

As an example, supposing your partner leads the 7 of Hearts against a Spade declaration and you find the following combination of cards in the dummy and in your own hand:

NORTH:
Hearts—7 2
WEST:
Hearts—K 10 5
SOUTH:
Hearts—A J 9 6 3
EAST:
Hearts—Q 8 4

It is obvious that the 7 is not the fourth best. Your partner may be leading from the K 10 7, but this is unlikely; it is more probable that he is leading from singleton, doubleton, or three cards.

In a situation of this description, you will find that it will probably pay you best to refuse to win the first trick and to content yourself with playing a card which you hope will encourage your partner to continue leading the suit on the next available opportunity; that is to say, play the 9 or the Jack on the first trick. When your partner gets in again, you hope that he will lead another heart, in which case you can play the Ace and give him a ruff on the third round. This line of play, of course, can only be adopted when the dummy holds at least three cards of the suit which your partner has led.

Of course, if dummy holds five or more cards of the suit you can then assume that your partner has led a singleton and play the Ace on the first trick.

DID THEY EXECUTE THE WRONG MAN?

Incident Of Cuban Troubles

Havana.
Gustavo Angulo was executed recently at Santiago, for placing a bomb in the home of the Chief of Customs at Puerto Padre.

Now the authorities have been informed that it was not Angulo who faced the firing squad, but the son of a German immigrant, Jaime Cienstein.

By Lieut-Col. H.M. Beasley

first round and return it immediately in the hope that your partner will be able to ruff.

The short suit lead may prove to be extremely valuable under certain conditions. For example, if the opponent on your right has opened the bidding and his partner, the opponent on your left, bids another suit, which throughout the bidding is unsupported by the original bidder, it is reasonable to assume that if you hold no strength in that particular suit, then the balance of that suit must be held by your partner.

Your best opening lead, therefore, is probably that suit. For example, if the bidding has been as follows:

| | | | |
|-------|------|--------|------|
| South | West | North | East |
| 1 H | No | 1 S | No |
| 2 H | No | 2 N.T. | No |
| 4 H | | | |

If you, West, hold:

Spades—7 5
Hearts—J 9 4
Diamonds—10 6 3
Clubs—K J 7 5

you have the choice of leading a Club or a Diamond or selecting your short suit, Spades, which has been denied by the opponent on your right.

In these circumstances, it would be preferable to disguise your strength in Diamonds and Clubs and lead the 7 of Spades.

WEALTHY YOUTHS GO BURGLING

Regarded Crimes As "Sport"

PRETTY GIRL WHO PLANNED ROBBERIES

Three youths, sons of wealthy parents, have been arrested at Vlasotinat, Rumania, while engaged in "deeds of daring" for the love of a pretty 18-year-old girl.

The "deeds of daring" were a series of burglaries. The girl has also been arrested.

The youths all said they were encouraged to steal by the girl, who rewarded with her favours the boldest in carrying out robberies on shops and banks, which she herself planned.

None of the youths needed the stolen money. All were well provided for by their parents. They looked upon their burglaries as a form of "sport."

NEPHEW OF LATE "RANJJI"

Spending Honeymoon In England

PRESENT AT JUBILEE CELEBRATIONS

Among Indian visitors to the Jubilee celebrations in Digvijay Sirjhi, Jam Sahib of Nawanagar and nephew of the late great "Ranjji."

The Jam Sahib will enjoy the Jubilee celebrations. But his first purpose in visiting England is to enjoy a quiet honeymoon, which he cannot have among relatives and official duties in India.

He was married two months ago to the daughter of the Maharao of Sirjhi.

Art was their meeting ground. She is an accomplished landscape painter. One of her sketches attracted the attention of the Prince two years ago. She presented it to him. They became friends, and married.

The Aga Khan's wedding present was a racehorse. The bride's father sent five elephants.

The Maharani proposes to make some sketches of Devonshire while she and the Jam Sahib are in England.

MOTERING NOTES - -

SOCIETY OF MOTOR MANUFACTURERS

Establishing Office In India

The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, Limited, have decided to establish an office in India and have appointed as their representative Mr. Dennis Edward Gough, B. Sc. It is intended that the territory to be covered shall include Ceylon and Burma.

The making of pedestrian crossings directs attention to developments likely to give drivers a better control of their vehicles now that they are so often called upon to make emergency stops. Sudden braking on greasy road surfaces causes skids which cause accidents. Sidding can, it is stated, be largely prevented by a process which may be applied to any tyre with enough depth of rubber, and at any garage which has the Tecalemit Penugrip machine. Application can be done quickly at the cost of 3s. to 4s. a tyre.

Tests made at Brooklands showed that with normal tyres the stopping distance on braking from 30 miles an hour on a concrete surface prepared with a 1in. mixture of loam and water was 72ft. With tyres treated by the Pneugrip process the stopping distance on the same surface was reduced to 44ft. without skidding.

BELGIAN CONTRACT FOR BRITAIN

Rolls-Royce To Supply Aero Engines

Rolls-Royce Ltd. have just obtained a large contract for their aero-engine department. This consists of a large number of engines for the Belgian Government to be fitted in service aeroplanes. Many engines of similar type have been in use in the country for some time in Fairey fighters and bombers.

The success of this type of engine in high speed machines has also led to orders recently from Holland, Portugal and Denmark.

MODERN BATTERIES ARE INADEQUATE

Many Complaints From Motorists

There are many complaints against the modern battery. Owners complain of finding the battery without a kick in it after leaving the car for an hour or two with the sidelamps on, and every cold snap brings more cases of cars that cannot be started without physical labour. In some of these cases the cars are not only relatively new but are fitted with "constant voltage" dynamos, the special function of which is to keep the battery well charged. In such cases the battery is clearly to blame, unless it has been badly neglected.

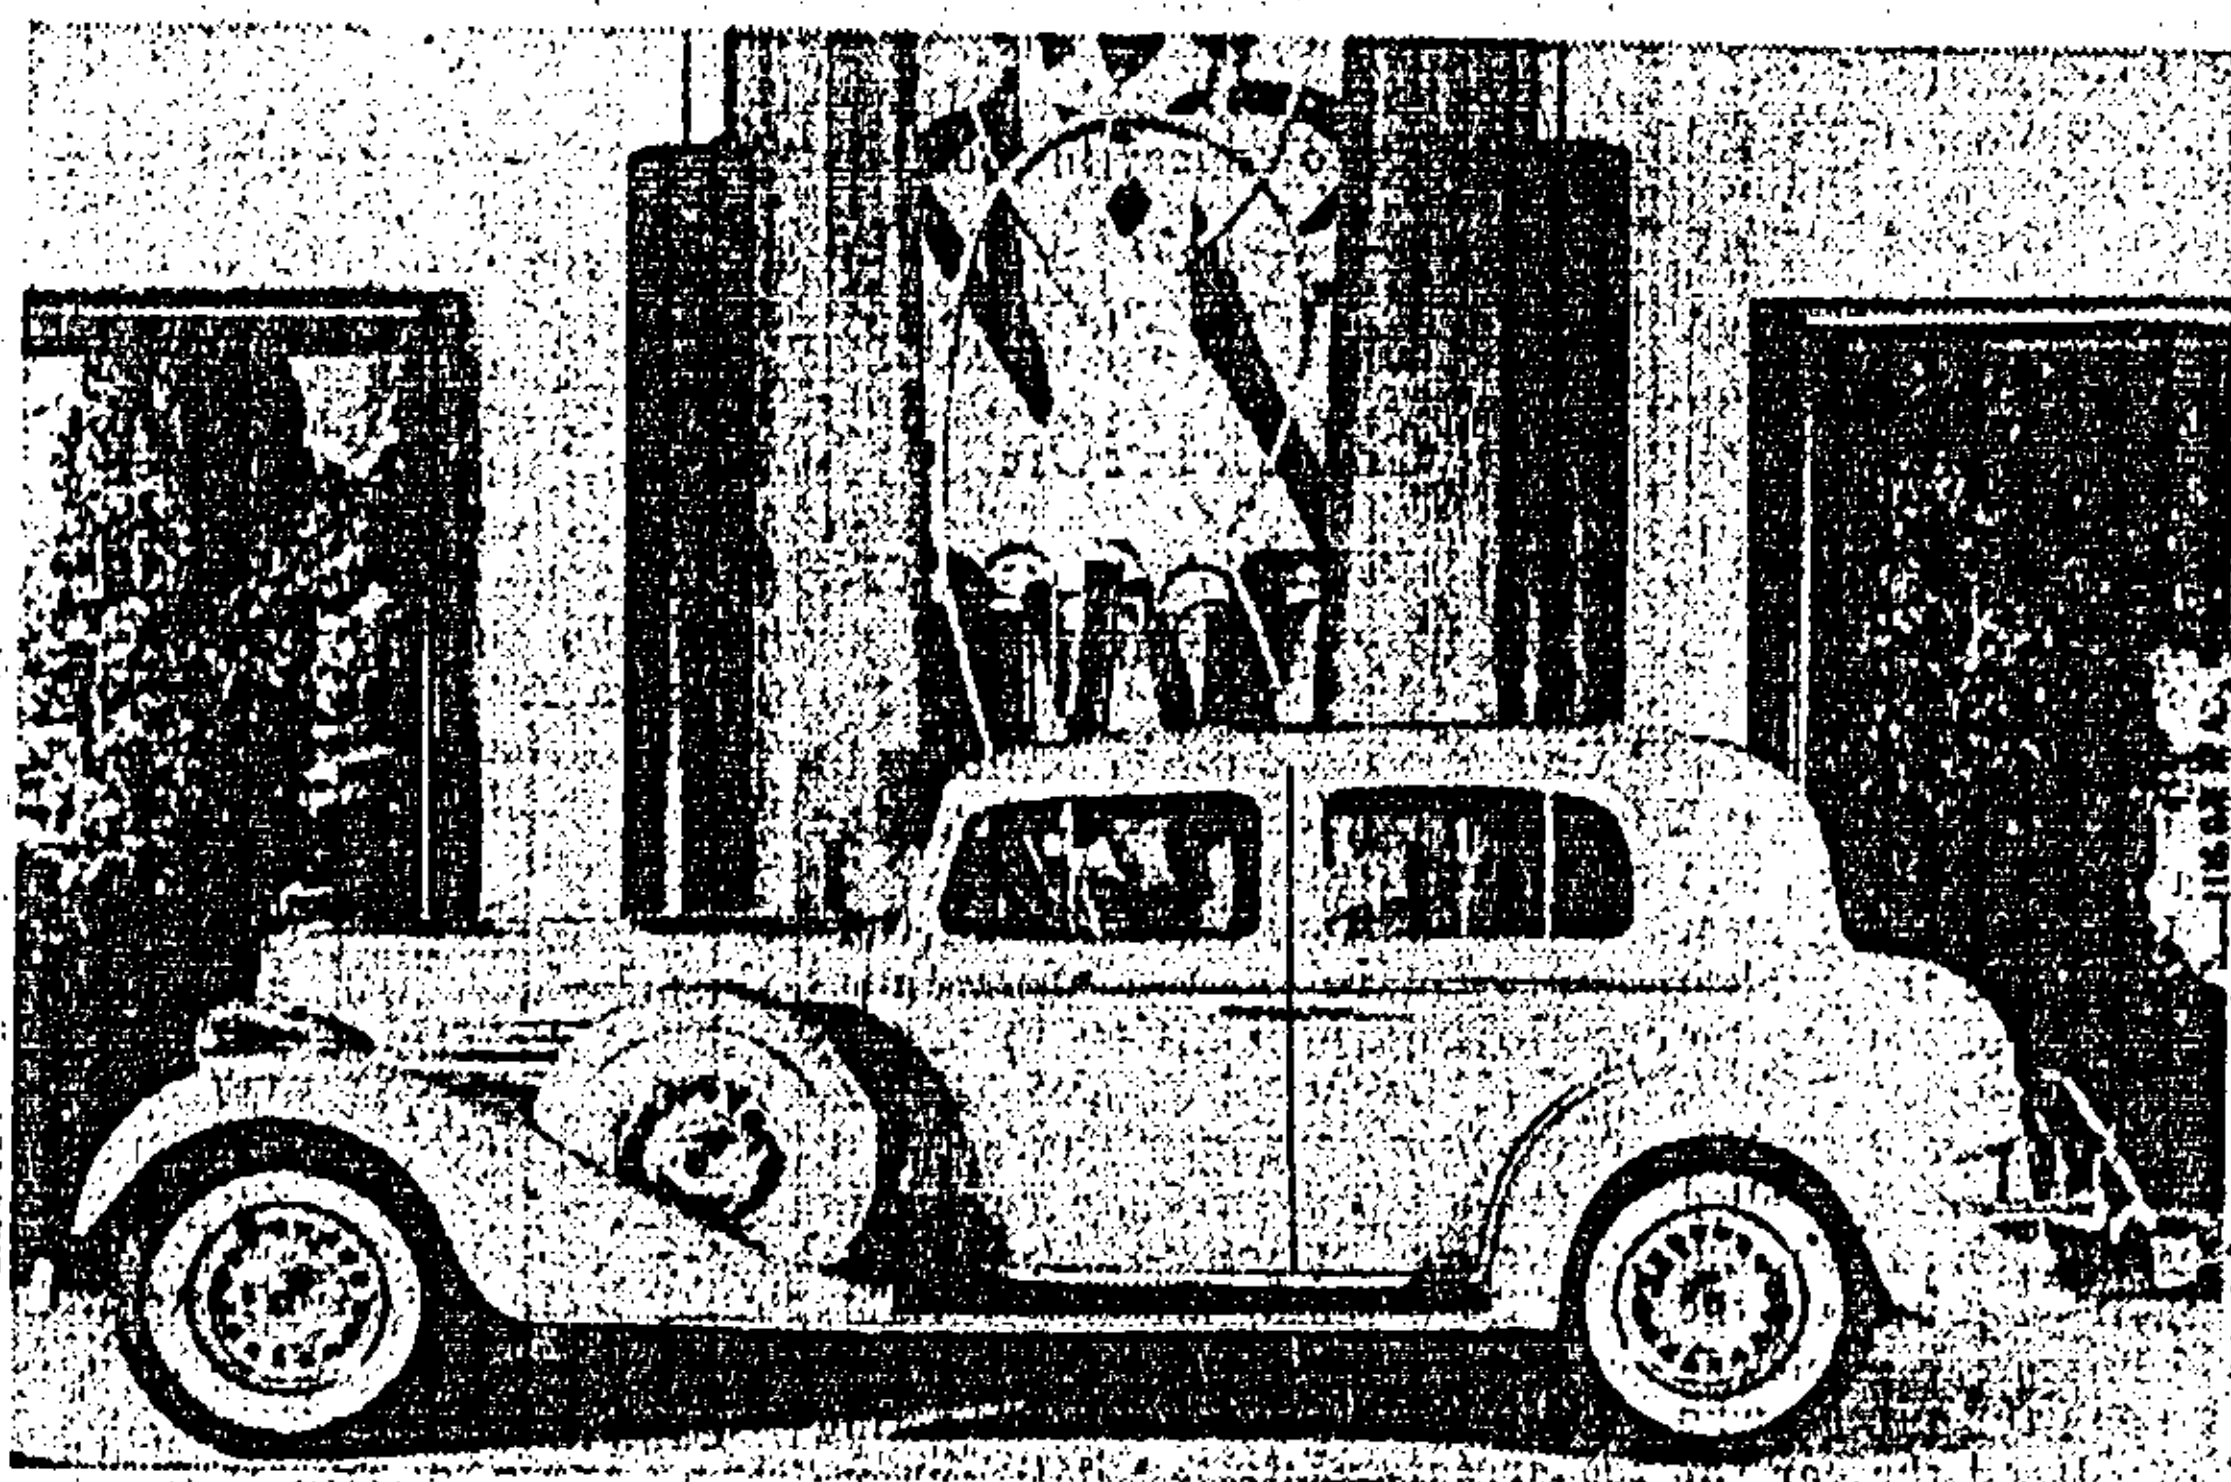

Every year more work is thrown on the battery with the steady increase of electrical accessories. On a car with standard fittings one can count, in some cases, 11 lamps as well as horn, starter, direction indicators and motor to drive dual screen-wipers. But standard batteries have not been enlarged to cope with these extra duties. They seem barely to have a full year's active life in them.

BRITAIN'S EXPORT MARKET

Considerable Progress In 1934

Considerable progress was shown in the export of British cars and commercial vehicles last year, representing an increase of over £1,000,000 in value, the majority of which resulted from the greater number of vehicles taken by New Zealand and Australia. There is already conclusive evidence that the reduction of tax at home has stimulated the industry to provide cars of higher power, of a type which will undoubtedly prove popular in the Overseas markets.

The production of private cars was 256,866 as against 220,779 in the previous 12 months, while the corresponding figures for commercial vehicles were 85,933 and 65,508.

This beautiful, roomy 1935 British model 61 Club Sedan with six-wheel equipment comfortably seats five people, has two inside sun shades, one for the driver and the front seat passenger and Fisher No Draft ventilating windows. Notice how the trunk is gracefully built into the body to conform with the smart streamline design.

How Difficult To Be Original!

All Tending To One Pattern

PRECONCEIVED OPINIONS AND BORROWED IDEAS

(By Phyllis Juby)

SIMPLY being oneself in everyday life is even more difficult than it used to be. Not in intellectual works, in literature and in art, but in everything which does not offend accepted customs; to be oneself when one walks, when one sits, when one is silent. Where is such originality to be found? To think and go straight on one's way as naturally as horses trot, without imitation, without reminiscence, without affectation, without human respect, without cowardice, without worry about what others will say, and, finally, to be simple and sincere. Behold originality, behold a great enterprise in which it is almost impossible to succeed. The usage of the world wears away that originality and obliterates even the personality itself. It breaks all individuality which is not sufficiently resistant and casts it in its mould of platitudes. Certainly there is a drawback from the start. The child can do little but copy patterns furnished by these who surround him. He goes to school, to a mass education where individual thinking is not encouraged. It is not the aim of state education to produce a scientific habit of mind, for credulity is a public advantage. But more than that. In the modern world there are three great sources of uniformity in addition to education; these are the press, the cinema, and the radio.

Cinema Influence

There is no great difference in the opinions inhibited from newspapers; in fact, their very nature tends to increase the rarity of unusual opinions. The same may be said of the radio; but even more may it be said of the cinema. Its influence on an almost world-wide uniformity is "overwhelming." The great majority of young people the world over gain their ideas on love, social position, the way to honour and money-making, the importance of dress, from evenings spent in seeing what Hollywood presents. They no doubt learn lofty sentiments: virtue is always rewarded, be the reward somewhat gross; sin is always punished. Wealth is ever a reward for virtue, therefore it follows that the wealthy are virtuous, and whatever reason may suggest to the contrary does not fit into the popular scheme.

Another modern factor that tends to form uniform tastes is advertising. Most of the things we believe we believe because we have heard them affirmed; we are not even critical enough to remember where or why they were affirmed. So long as an impression is made, the desired result is achieved. The brand of soap advertised by pictures of the most famous Hollywood beauties is bound to have tremendous sales no matter how abominable it may be.

Even our religions tend more and more towards a mass emotion without serious thought. No wonder Bernard Shaw remarked: "That rare and admirable thing, a Free-thinker; the only sort of thinker, I may remark, whose thoughts and consequently whose religious convictions command any respect."

Mental Confusion

Students to-day complete their education without so much as a reproach for foolish and vague generalisation, and, indeed intellectual sloppiness of academic dignitaries is not unheard of. It would trouble us to clear up this mental confusion; it would trouble us not to believe what we have heard repeated with emphasis. Madame de Staël, speaking of the intellect of the world, says somewhere:

"A man of intellect told me once that one night at a masked ball, passing before a mirror, he knew not how to distinguish himself from the crowd wearing the same black domino as himself. One can say the same of the dress in which the intellect clothes itself. One almost confounds it with others, because the character of each shows so little." Generalise this observation and immediately you will realise that it is the same in every phase of work and life. Why renounce and cast off our natures, only to conform to customs and fashions? "Since Adam the blockheads have been in the majority." And the blockheads are those who make the fashions. Submit to the blockheads and you become one yourself. If one has to make concessions in indifferent matters like the cut of coat or hair, it would be great folly to take them as models in matters where judgment is important and individual assurance more valuable than theirs. Don't cease to be yourself to be everybody, because, besides other inconveniences, as everyone is everybody but himself, the result is that everybody is nobody.

We so often follow the customs of our environment simply for the sake of appearance, although the customs are stupid and our common sense condemns them. Jean Jacques Rousseau goes as far as to say: "Do everything contrary to customs, and you will always do right."

One should follow nature. Unfortunately one follows it but little, scarcely at all. "A sheeplike race," says Alexandre Dumas in his "Memories," "which ever existed, and which, not having the force to form an opinion by its own judgment, takes an opinion ready-made where it finds it."

Ready-Made Opinions

"The world is full of 'intellects,'" cries Voltaire, "who know not how they should think." See this general weakness at the first night presentation of any dramatic or musical work, where one hears the timidity or rashness of opinion, each of equal value. The timid wait to follow other opinions, the rash fall to wait for even a proper impression before exclaiming: "Wonderful!" or "Stupid!" They aim less to judge well than to hit hard.

Another writer enlarges on this view: "It is astonishing that, with all the arrogance with which we are swelled and the high opinion we have of ourselves and our judgments, we neglect to recognise the merits of others. The vogue, popularity, carries us away like a torrent. We praise those who are praised more than those who are praiseworthy."

Should we go too far in humility we pass for blockheads; in assurance, for brutes. And from these two excesses all false appreciations are born. Instead of dying, they live and propagate, and very small lies finish by becoming great truths. What is necessary for an error to circulate, grow and make its career? To be said once, that is sufficient. It is said, it is not contested, it goes on its way. Many good men rally behind it, a century, two centuries pass, it fortifies itself, it reigns, it crushes everything. Revolution would need to follow revolution to destroy it. And it was started by a few sheep mixed with some asses. That is how the world moves. In the future State, should one who is not of the governing class show marked individuality, it will probably be found necessary to send him to the lethal chamber before his ill-disciplined intelligence has had time to spread revolt. But in the meantime is there no solution for the honest man?

Coins From A Mould

It is most difficult to be oneself, firstly because one lacks the natural ability or one is a badly-balanced personality, a coin badly minted. Men are, for the most part, like coins, showing the effigy of the ruling power, that is to say, yielding to the most powerful stamp, and being obliterated in the measure of their circulation. Or they are obliterated less quickly according to

"Howdo, sir." He saluted the doctor gravely: "I've been thinking of calling your way for a long time past."

"Indeed?" The doctor didn't quite know what to make of it. Just in case of violence though, he stepped a little nearer his brawny manservant: "Anything wrong, Quilp?"

Jonah nodded towards his wife. "She'll tell you."

And she did. Explosively she told of Jonah's strangeness, how she'd shot the birds to cure him, but how he'd gone on talking to them just the same like the madman he was.

"He's clean gone, doctor. I'm sure."

Jonah spoke to her quietly. "What's this about shooting the birds? You're dreaming, woman!"

"Dreaming, am I?" Excitedly she pulled the doctor to the gate, pointing downwards. Then her hand wavered and fell. There was nothing to be seen except a night-fingale on her nest in the depth of the thorn bush. Her mouth fell open, her tongue hammering soundlessly. She stared bewilderedly, and suddenly she began to laugh horribly, madly.

"You see how it is, sir," Jonah said, and the doctor nodded and gestured his manservant to lead the howling, splitting woman back down the path.

"I'm sorry, Quilp. You have my sympathy. You must have had a difficult time. It's in their blood, I'm afraid. Queer the way they see madness in others. Her mother was just the same. It might have been awkward for you, though, in any other parish."

Alone again, Jonah shrugged away regrets and very carefully restored the stuffed nightingale and nest to the glass-fronted box borrowed from The Little Meammore, turning peacefully indoors, tiny echoes of bird song waking in his mind.

the hardness of the alloy. The latter, more mature and well-balanced, ceases to remain himself in the wear of time. The imitation, whether voluntary or involuntary, becomes a substitute for the natural. Instead of behaving by reason we are led by authority. This is done, that is not done; and these words absurdly decide everything.

Women, with their powder, their paint, their eyebrow pencil, go to a lot of trouble to make themselves ugly. Men and women, by imitation, go to a lot of trouble to make themselves more stupid.

Involuntary imitation enters into all our actions, all our words, all our thoughts, into our whole life. Unconsciously we imitate each other's gestures, words, even the inflections of the voice. Involuntary imitation rules even our sentiments. Who can say what part of our emotion is sincere and what is reminiscence? The books we read remain in our life as a distant echo although we are not aware of it. The moment we believe ourselves carried away by passion, may we not be unconsciously playing this tragedy or that drama which we saw long ago? We are actors and spectators at the same time. Emotional actors and curious spectators.

Affectations

What is left to say of the affectation which so much prevents us from being ourselves, and which is often so mixed with our nature that we can no longer tell them apart? George Sand said, speaking of one of her heroes:

"A mixture of the affectation and the natural was so delicately blended that one could not distinguish one from the other, as in a mixture of certain essences where it is impossible to recognise the taste or the odour of the original elements."

See then the real meaning of the word of Diogenes, who, walking in full daylight with a lighted lamp, said: "I am looking for a man!" He did not mean a great man, or a philosopher, or an intellect, but simply a true man. A man who could not be mistaken for another, a coin of his own mould, and made of hard and resisting metal. Oh, rare piece! A man who is himself, who feels with his own heart. A man who sees with his own eyes and not through the spectacles of others, who is not a mass product of the society into which he is born.

Behold the thing which seems to be so simple that it appears an excessive naivety or a bad joke to proclaim it as the most difficult thing in the world.

CHINESE ARMY REORGANISATION ON GERMAN MODEL

General Tu's Declaration In Berlin

"MANCHUKUO IS THE CHINESE SAAR"

Berlin, Yesterday.

"The Chinese army will be reorganised on the German model," declared General Tu Chi-chien, chief of the Military Academy at Canton, who has been here for two and a half months studying the organisation of the German army. He was especially struck by the efficiency of the Army and the Air Force, which he described as the most modern in the world.

He added that the Chinese nation would never recognise Manchukuo, the population of which was 90 per cent. Chinese. He declared: "Manchukuo is the Chinese Saar."

CHINESE REPUBLIC JUBILEE?

CANTON VISITORS IMPRESSED

Chinese visitors from this city were very much impressed by the inspiring parade at Happy Valley and the three-hour procession, which is said to have been the most elaborate and magnificent ever seen in South China. Certain exhibits in the procession were supplied by Canton, Fatsan, Chenchuen and Kongmoon.

The success of the Silver Jubilee in Hong Kong has inspired the Canton Daily Sun to suggest, editorially, that a Chinese Silver Jubilee be held next year in honour of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Chinese Republic. Stressing the economic advantages of such a celebration, the paper declared:

"There will be universal interest evoked in China, and the attention of the world will be focussed on her. There will be congratulatory messages from other nations, perhaps deputations, and this will develop foreign intercourse and create sympathetic understanding with other countries."

"Overseas Chinese will come to their home country in large numbers and this will keep up their bonds of love for the mother country. China will gain immensely by tourist traffic and this will further help to popularise Chinese goods in the overseas markets."

"Railways, steamers, aeroplanes, and other such means of transportation will have a chance to gain financially, and generally there will not be any aspects of the Chinese life that will not receive encouragement."

LAST DAY OF JUBILEE WEEK

LONDON SCENE OF JUBILATION

Crowd Cheer King And Queen At Palace

CHILDREN WATCH ROYAL PROCESSIONAL DRIVE

London, Last Night.

The last day of a memorable week—but by no means to end of the festivities connected with the Royal Jubilee—was marked by notable celebrations in London, Edinburgh, Belfast and Cardiff.

London last night was again the scene of demonstrative jubilation, and the King and Queen once more appeared on the balcony to respond to the cheers of a vast crowd, who remained there for hours. As Their Majesties left the balcony the crowd sang the National Anthem.

CHILDREN INVADERS CITY

This morning London was invaded by armies of happy and excited children. They came in contingents of many thousands from all the outlying districts of the Metropolitan area. Carefully shepherded by their teachers they marched to stands which by the King's wish had been reserved for them, so that they might see Their Majesties. In the best possible circumstances on the first of the four processionals drives to be made on successive Saturdays to various parts of London.

The arrangements had been made for the transport and comfort of the children by the staff of the London County Council in co-operation with the Office of Works, the London police and the railway. Underground and bus authorities. During periods of waiting the children were entertained by bands of the Brigade of Guards and by the British Broadcasting Corporation programmes broadcast through loud speakers, interspersed with bursts of community singing. The road from Hyde Park Corner to the Marble Arch was lined by 15,000 kids from different youth organisations.

FLOODLIGHTING

Although officially the floodlighting display which has been such a notable feature of the Jubilee celebration will end after next week, when the lights on Government buildings will be removed, many commercial and private buildings in London and the provinces will continue their floodlighting indefinitely.—British Wireless Service.

To compare the movements of the dragon with those of a serpent is an inadequate description, for no snake could have accomplished some of the feats this dragon performed.

CHASING THE PEARL

A huge red lantern, supposed to represent a very valuable pearl, is carried by in front of the dragons nose. As the scent of the pearl reaches the dragon—a great tribute to its olfactory powers—it raises its head slowly and begins its vain attempt to catch the pearl. Ponderously the gigantic body rises, the head swaying continuously, the great yellow eyes gleaming with greed, while the tail takes up a rhythmic swing.

As the pearl moves away the dragon follows and the first of the five dances is under way. The pace quickens. Each turn the pearl taken is assiduously followed by the dragon and before long it is coiled in such fantastic shapes that it is almost impossible to distinguish its head from its tail. Then in an incredibly short space of time it is uncoiled and stretching the whole length of the field. Every time a difficult feat like this is carried through, and that is often, the cheers of the crowd are almost deafening.

A BREATHING-SPACE

And then suddenly the quaint music, the monotonous beating of drums and clash of cymbals, which has accompanied the performance, dies out, and the dragon, completely exhausted, sinks down.

In order that the crowd should not become bored during the period required for the dragon to recover its breath, clowns, tigers, lions, and men dressed as women, patrol the ground and amuse the audience.

Three other dances follow and then the great Silver Dragon is brought on to the field to fight with the Gauze Dragon for the pearl. But which wins in the end is not clear to the non-Chinese spectator.

PRINCE OF WALES IN CARDIFF

Duke And Duchess Of York In Edinburgh

DUKE OF GLOUCESTER VISITS IRELAND

The Jubilee celebrations in Wales, designed not only to show the loyalty of the Welsh, but to express the Welsh spirit and character by nation-wide festivities and pageants, culminated in a great display in Cardiff yesterday, where the Prince of Wales arrived by air at 11 a.m.

He placed a wreath on the Welsh National War Memorial, and afterwards laid the foundation stone of the new Administrative Buildings of the Welsh Board of Health. The rest of the day was crowded with visits to as many different functions as possible. He attended a children's festival on the International Rugby Ground, and the Military Review at Sophia Gardens.

VISIT TO EDINBURGH

The main idea of the Edinburgh celebrations was to see that the day was made particularly memorable for the young and for the old. The Duke and Duchess of York visited the city yesterday and attended a dinner for 2,000 aged poor people, and also a meal given to 1,600 poor children.

After laying a bouquet on the Stone of Remembrance they went to Murrayfield, known to Rugby enthusiasts throughout the world, where they saw a display by 19,000 children belonging to various organisations in the city. The children again played a prominent part in the centre of Edinburgh, when there was a pageant in the Prince's Street Gardens. There were many other functions and the day concluded with a bonfire on Arthur's Seat, the sentinel peak which for many miles around Edinburgh is the dominating natural feature of the landscape.

The Duke of York is also Earl of Inverness and the Duchess has been a Scot for "hundreds of years," as they say in Scotland.

BELFAST ALSO HONOURED

When the Duke of Gloucester went to Belfast yesterday in connection with the Silver Jubilee celebrations, he received a rousing reception. The Duke bears the title Earl of Ulster, and plans were afoot to make his Ulster visit memorable.

There was a fiery chain right across Northern Ireland. Bonfires and beacons 10 ft. high were lighted on the hill tops by Boy Scouts and members of the British Legion, and there were showers of multi-coloured rockets. The visit of the Duke made a historic day.

BALKAN PACT SIGNATORIES IN CONFERENCE

Hapsburg Restoration Said To Be Opposed

SETBACK TO PRO-GERMAN MOVEMENT

Bucharest, Yesterday.

A conference of the signatories of the Balkan Pact, namely, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece, and Turkey, held to discuss political and economic questions, opened here yesterday afternoon.

It is believed that the conference will decide to oppose the restoration of the Hapsburgs and the rearming of Austria, Hungary, and Bulgaria unless the Great Powers supply sufficient guarantees.

The presence of M. Paul-Boncour, a former Foreign Minister, is interpreted to mean that France is particularly interested in the outcome of the conference. It is reported that the French Legation will be elevated to the rank of an Embassy and that King Carol of Rumania will later visit Paris. This is regarded as a blow to the pro-German movement.

It is hoped also that the conference will agree to establish a clearing system, to supersede the monetary transfers until the international exchange difficulties are overcome.—Reuter.
